Unemployment up 2nd month in row

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment increased for the second month in a row in July, rising from 7.5 to 7.8 per cent, and leaving more people out of work than at any time in the past seven months, the government said today.

At the same time, however, the Labor Department said about 400,000 more people found jobs in July, pushing total employment to a record 87.9 million.

But the pickup in hiring since the recession has apparently lured into the job market thousards of workers, particularly adult women, who hadn't bothered to look for a job when times were tight.

The number of people without jobs in July rose 280,000 to 7.4 million, the most since 7.8 million couldn't find work in December. The 7.8 per cent unemployment was the highest since an identical level in January.

The 7.5 per cent unemployment rate in June was an increase over the 7.3 per cent level in May. The June-July increases represent a threat to the administration's projections that unemployment will slip below 7 per cent by December.

There were fewer people unemployed in January than there are now, but the unemployment rates were the same because the labor force is constantly growing.

The work force has grown by 2.3 million, or 2.5 per cent, in the past year. Part of that is accounted for by normal population growth, but the rate is far above the eight-tenths of a per cent growth in the total population last year.

The bulk of the growth in the labor force — 1.4 million — has been among adult women, even though they represent less than a third of the total work force. The percentage of working-age women at work or seeking a job has risen to 47.4 per cent from 46.1 per cent a year ago.

The number of women in the work force has traditionally been considered a signal of the pressure families feel for beefing up their incomes. And economists still consider that to be a factor, but in recent years demographers have found a surge in womens' work force participation rates unrelated to underlying economic conditions.

The unemployment rate for adult women in July was 7.6 per cent, up from 7.1 per cent in June. Adult male unemployment was 6.1 per cent, compared to 6 per cent the previous month.

Unemployment among household heads climbed to 5.4 per cent from 5.1 per cent.

Unemployment among blacks and teen-agers improved, but analysts said the rates remain so high that the change isn't likely to signal any dramatic improvement. Unemployment among teen-agers slipped to 18.1 per cent from 18.4 per cent. Among blacks the rate fell from 13.3 per cent to 12.9 per cent.

Littons buried today

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. (AP) — Congressman Jerry Litton, killed in a plane crash on the eve of being elected Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate, was buried today with his wife and two children who died with him, mourned by neighbors and notables alike.

Meanwhile, authorities probed the cause of a plane crash that killed him and five other persons on takeoff from Chillicothe to Kansas City where he was to have celebrated his victory in Tuesday's Missouri primary.

About 60 dignitaries from Washington, including White House, congressional and military representatives, were among those expected at the United Methodist Church for the funeral of Litton, 39, his wife, Sharon, 38, and their children, Scott, 12, and Linda, 13.

Paul Rupp Jr., the 44-year-old pilot and friend of Litton's, and his son, Paul III, also were killed in the crash Tuesday night.

The Rupp funeral was held earlier today. Results of an autopsy on Rupp would take several weeks, Tom Otke, Livingston County coroner, said.

The pallbearers for Litton were Edwin Turner, C.P. Hutchison and Charles Reed, all of Chillicothe, Dev O'Neil of Washington, Lowell Mohler of Jefferson City and William Powell of Princeton, Mo.

Pallbearers for Mrs. Litton were Don Chapman, Ken Hardin, Ken Churchill and Pat Crabtree, all of Chillicothe, Don Schooler, of Brookfield, Mo., and Al Cohen of Kansas City.

Security remained tight around the crash site Thursday, but was removed after the wreckage was transferred to an airport hangar.

The Highway Patrol took extra precautions today in anticipation of sightseers. Traffic was heavy Thursday along U.S. 36, where curious motorists tried to get a good look at the wreckage, just off the highway.

Thankful to be alive

Sikeston family caught in Colorado flash flood

By RON PORTER

Call it divine intervention, fate or just plain luck, but it finally comes down to this: The engine on their motor home died, and so the Larry Steward family did not.

The Stewards, who live at 102 Goldbirer, were driving along Highway 34 in Big Thompson Canyon near Loveland, Colo., Saturday night when a flash flood swept down the canyon, killing a still undetermined number of people.

The four of them — Larry, his wife Shirley, daughter Stephania, 8, and son Stepahn, 4 were on a vacation trip through the mountain states when they found themselves traveling through Big Thompson Canyon on a short cut from the Yellowstone Grand Teton area to Denver.

They flew back to Sikeston Tuesday with little more than the clothes on their backs, thankful to be alive.

It started raining about 8 p.m. Saturday, but Steward said they were not concerned.

"It wasn't even a good Sikeston rain," he said, then added, "but for every quarter of a mile we progressed, it got 20 per cent more intense. Still, it rains harder in Sikeston."

Then, as their motor home started up a hill, a rock slide tumbled across their path. They could not back up because they were pulling a motorcycle trailer and there were cars behind them, so they tried to drive over the rocks.

The water rushing down the rock slide hit the big yellow motor home and the engine died. Steward restarted the engine and tried again to get over the rocks. Again the engine died.

Others behind them were impatient and passed, including a large motor home. The motor home struck the Steward's motorcycle trailer and began to slide off the road toward the river. The driver swung back onto the road and struck the Stewards' motor home in the side.

The driver kept on going and did not stop. The Stewards later learned that motor home was washed away in the flood.

Steward finally restarted the engine and managed to drive to a wide spot on the road where he stopped and walked back to look at the damaged motorcycle carrier.

It was so badly damaged they had to leave it there, Steward said, planning to call for a wrecker to get it later. That was the last time they saw their motorcycles.

They decided to say where they were for awhile. "Things started to get worse and worse and to rain harder and harder," Steward said.

Still, the thought of the river endangering them was the last thing on their minds. They were parked 20 to 30 feet above the banks.

They had no way of knowing that a 12- foot high wall of water was coming down the canyon toward them and that it would leave a path of destruction 30 miles long.

"The thing that concerned us was that the place where we were parked was gradually becoming a river with water rushing down the highway," Steward said. He said they worried about a log or rock coming down the road and striking the motor home.

"We were not concerned about the river, but about the motor home," Mrs. Steward said. "We were afraid it might go floating off the road. We had no idea the road was caving in."

That is just what the road was doing. A car that went by them returned a minute later because the road was washed out just 50 feet around the bend. About the same distance behind, the road was also gone.

Five vehicles, containing 14 people, were stranded on the small section of remaining highway. By now, Steward had pulled the motor home back up onto the road to get away from the water on the edge of the highway.

It did not help much. They watched as a man struggled to get back into his camper, also parked on the road. The water was up to the man's waist.

They still were not concerned about the creek. But then someone in the car ahead flashed a light out into the canyon and there was the river, now just a few feet below the highway.

They said that was when they realized just how much trouble they were in.

"By the time it dawned on us what was happening, for many people it was too late," Steward said.

Mrs. Steward opened the door to look out and water started

Cyclist killed in crash

A rural East Prairie man was killed and three persons received minor injuries in three area traffic accidents Thursday and early today, according to the highway patrol. The fatality was the 67th on Southeast Missouri roads this year compared to 61 at the same time last year.

William Randolph Barker, 27, of East Prairie Route Two was pronounced dead at the scene of a motorcycle accident which occurred at 12:35 a.m. today on Highway 80 half a mile east of East Prairie.

According to the patrol, Barker's westbound motorcycle struck a guard rail while traveling at a high rate of speed, throwing Barker from the vehicle into a bridge embankment. The patrol report indicated he was not wearing a motorcycle helmet. The motorcycle continued to skid across the bridge and struck a parked vehicle.

Barker was born May 8, 1949 in Cairo, Ill., son of Mrs. Opal Marie Morgan Barker of rural East Prairie and the late Ben Barker.

A resident of Mississippi County all of his life, he was employed by National Lock & Key Co. at Sikeston, and was a member of Nelson Memorial United Methodist Church.

He was a Navy veteran of the Vietnam War.

In addition to his mother, survivors include: three brothers, Sam Barker of East Prairie, William Barker of Charleston and Harry Blaine Barker of Dexter; and three sisters, Mrs. Carline Ruth Smithson of Sunnyvale, Calif., Mrs. Mera Ben Bess of St. Louis and Mrs. Eugenia Adkison of East Prairie.

Friends may call after 6 p.m. today at Shelby Funeral Home in East Prairie, where services are scheduled at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The Rev. Jim Norris, pastor of Nelson Memorial United Methodist Church, will officiate.

Burial will follow in IOOF Cemetery near Charleston.

Killer disease not flu

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) - Scientists today elimiated influenza and fungi as possible causes of the mysterious "legionnaires' disease." They said test results point toward a toxic substance as a cause for the disease that has claimed 25 lives.

"The epidemic has peaked and is on its way out," Dr. David Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta told a news conference.

Researchers admitted, however, that they still haven't been able to identify the specific cause of the disease despite four days of tests in a state laboratory in Philadelphia and the CDC.

"What we know is really what we don't know. It is possible we'll never know," Sencer told an Atlanta news conference.

But "I think all of us can breathe a sigh of relief that this is not flu," he said.

He added, "We still have no firm evidence of any secondary transmission," meaning the disease is not contagious.

"Unfortunately, people are still dying," Sencer said. "There are 25 dead and 153 cases, but the number is coming down."

The toll rose to 25 today, up from two from the earlier count of 23.

Sencer added that chemistry tests for toxic agents are more complicated than those which have eliminated influenza as a possible cause and that he could not say when results of the tests might show what kind of toxin caused the illness.

Sencer said the toxin could have come from a chemical present in everyday materials such as plastics or paper.

"There are a wide variety of agents — pesticides, fungicides, organic phosphorous agents or heavy metals" that could act as a toxin, he said.

All the persons who got the disease in the past two weeks attended a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia last month.

THE HORNET'S NEST

According to the Associated Press news dispatch, the "seemingly routine" HEW order banning traditional father-son, mother-daughter school functions has "stirred a hornet's nest of national protestation." And it is further reported that the President was "shocked" by the HEW letter and ordered it reviewed.

But why in the world should the President be "shocked"? After all, the HEW bureaucrats can argue (not without substantial justification) that they were simply following the law prescribed by Congress, specifically,the infamous "Title IX" of the 1972 Civil Rights Act which states: "Any aid, benefit, or service to a student shall not, on the basis of sex, subject any person to separate or different rules of behavior, sanctions or other treatment."

Not only that, but two of the leading Presidential candidates — Mr. Ford and Mr. Carter — have declared that they favor ratification of the radical so-called "Equal Rights Amendment" to the Constitution, which goes far beyond the controversial Title IX. The proposed "ERA" Amendment would, if ratified, not only apply to students, as does Title IX; it would apply to every living soul, male and female, from cradle to grave.

Specifically, the Amendment reads: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." There are no "ifs," no "ands," no "buts"; no exceptions of any kind or description. No more father- son banquets. No more mother- daughter functions. No boys schools. No girls schools. No more Young Men's Christian Association. No more Young Women's Christian Association. No longer will a wife be permitted to stay home as a wife and mother and then, in retirement years, collect social security payments on money earned by her husband — that would be "unequal treatment." All women must be brought down to the level of men.

You doubt it? The militantly radical "NOW" group (National Organization For Women) which aggressively promotes passage of ERA, totally supports the HEW letter. "Such father- son gatherings perpetuate harmful sexual stereotypes," was the official "NOW" response.

Was the HEW action stupid? No more so than the stupidity of the "liberal" Congress which agreed with the "NOW" philosophy and passed Title IX into law.

In the last analysis, the father - son, mother- daughter fiasco goes right back to the American electorate. Clearly, better judgment must be exercised in casting votes. And this year, above all years, every single eligible voter must vow, now, not only to vote in the forthcoming elections, but to vote selectively and intelligently.

WHERE THE HORSES AND BURROS ROAM

From The Washington Post

When Congress passed the Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act five years ago, it seemed that a blanket of federal protection had been placed over those animals which are regarded as elusive friends by lovers of nature—and as foes by many ranchers in the West. Unfortunately, the blanket never settled.

Opposition to the law was widespread; wild horses continued to be trapped and slaughtered; and, eventually, a federal court in New Mexico held the act to be unconstitutional. The court said that the Constitution gives Congress power to regulate wild animals and public lands only to protect the land and not to protect the animals themselves.

The Supreme Court has now reversed this decision. It asserted that Congress does indeed have power to regulate and protect the wildlife living on public lands. That is not just good news for horses and burros—it is also good news for the country.

The high court's ruling removes any legal question about the right of the Federal Government to maintain some parts of the country in their natural state. And it turns back an attack on other federal wildlife protective laws, which would have been sure to come if the lower court had been upheld. Not all such laws are popular, of course, in every part of the country. Some are seen as unwise by the wildlife's human neighbors who often regard the animals as pure pests.

The case is also a useful reminder that federalism is still a large element in the manner in which the country is governed. The claim made by New Mexico that Congress was trying to usurp a part of its inherent power was not frivolous. The states have always had the major role in regulating wildlife and are likely to continue to have it.

The court upheld only that part of the wild horses act which protects the animals while they are on public land; it put off for another case the constitutionality of the protection the act gives to those animals when they roam onto private or state-owned land. We would not bet much on their chances there—either in fact or in court. So we wish that—some way or other—these survivors of the past who wander free in the West could get the message: Stay on Uncle Sam's land, he'll protect you.

Efforts to get the attention of passing pedestrians and motorists proved futile. My father, a follower of "There's got to be an easier way," preferred to think his way out of the predicament. Eyeing the American flag flying from the building's rooftop flagpole, he arrived at a plan. Dad took down the flag and re-hoisted it, upside down, as a sign of distress. THE NEW KING-MAKERS

Ever since the campaign reform act was passed, we have been wondering who would end up with the political power the law takes away from wealthy people by severe limits on the size of political contributions. We are now starting to discern the answer. The new political king-makers will be rock musicians.

The eye-opener in this respect was the California senatorial bid by Tom Hayden, ex-student radical and Mrs. Jane Fonda. In the end, Senator John Tunney put down the upstart primary challenge, but not before Mr. Hayden's well financed campaign put quite a scare into regular California Democrats.

Mr. Hayden's campaign was graced by benefit performances by seven rock stars; the events raised $75,000, or 10 per cent of the cost of the campaign. A fellow named Jackson Brown, whose singing and guitar playing holds special charm for Southern Californians, gave a couple hours of his time, attracted 10,000 people and raised $30,000 for Mr. Hayden.

The idea is spreading, with other Californians naturally in the lead. Governor Jerry Brown's quixotic presidential campaign has been boosted by the same Jackson Brown, as well as Linda Ronstadt and The Eagles. Jimmy Carter, meanwhile, landed the Allman Brothers, a rock group with, naturally, a country flavor.

Under the campaign reform act Stewart Mott, rich heir, can give candidate Hayden only $1,000. How come Jackson Brown, rock star, can give him $30,000? Good question.

Well, you see, the act makes no limits on contributions of time. Suzi Coed can stuff envelopes for her hero for as many hours as she likes. An advisory opinion from the Federal Election Commission holds that Jackson Brown is only giving time. He is doing what Suzi Coed does, not what Stewart Mott does. Now you tell one.

A spokesperson for the FEC says that a doctor or lawyer could definitely not give five free hours of eye surgery or merger advice with the proceeds going to a candidate. If a complaint about the rock musicians comes along, she says, the commission may have to "evaluate" it again.

So we can see the loophole being closed with a ruling parsing out the per-hour value of contributions of time: 1,000 hours at $1 an hour for Suzi Coed, for minutes at $15,000 an hour for Jackson Brown. This of course opens endless further questions: Must Suzi be evaluated at the same point, someone might even decide the law is pretty silly to begin with.

For symbolic reasons, though, we rather like the law as it is, loop-hole and all. Somehow it is a monument to the current reformist mentality to have a law that reduces the political impact of property and enhances the political impact of rock stars.—Wall Street Journal

Planning and the American Economy -- An Inside White House View

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is recognized in White House circles as the man closest to his old friend Jerry Ford -- and possibly the most knowledgeable economic policy spokesman for the President.

By L. WILLIAM SEIDEMAN
Assistant to the President for Economic Affairs

WASHINGTON D. C. — The United States has the most planned economy in the world. At first blush, such an assertion by an admirer of Adam Smith strikes many as incredible. In fact, it has been said that we in the Ford administration are so opposed to planning that we consider Adam Smith's "invisible hand" to be an unwarranted intrusion in the marketplace.

But further reflection reveals not only the accuracy of the claim that the United States is the world's most planned economy, but the rationale behind it.

Millions of business men and farmers do the principal job of planning in the United States. Many nations have more national governmental economic planning; but attempts to centrally direct economic activity should not necessarily be considered as evidence of more planning. Some planning occurs in every economic system. The crucial variable is whether the planning is concentrated in the public or private sector.

Periods of recession always seem to produce proposals for national governmental economic planning as a means of correcting the imperfections of the free market. Our recent recession was no exception. Proponents of national planning have coalesced around two proposed bills, the Balanced Growth and Economic Planning Act of 1975 (the Humphrey-Javits bill) and the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act of 1976 (the Humphrey- Hawkins bill).

Earlier this year the Joint Economic Committee of the Congress also issued a majority report calling for comprehensive long- range planning. More recently, the proposed Democratic party platform called for national economic planning.

The renewed interest in national economic planning stems in part from those who wish to use it as a vehicle for implementing their vision of how society should be structured. They are not satisfied with the allocation of resources that result from the market. Irving Kristol has perceptively observed, they want the "power which in a capitalist system is supposed to reside in the free market."

Indeed, this is precisely what central planning is all about -- making decisions about the allocation of resources by a few individuals at the center rather than permitting participation by all the people through allocation by the market.

Even assuming a national economic plan were desirable, there are major difficulties with such an exercise in the United States. First, long- range planning, if it is to be effective, requires accurate forecasting. How could an economic planning board know where to allocate capital how much to raise or reduce taxes, or otherwise direct the economy without accurate forecasting?

Forecasting, even in the shortrun, is difficult. Despite considerable effort, economists have had a disappointing track record in forecasting the future, particulary for an extended period.

Getting an accurate forecast is a minor problem compared with a second difficulty that would then face a central planning board. If the board were to have any value, it would be forced to make decisions for thousands of industries, millions of firms, and numerous governmental units at incredible speed and under constantly changing conditions. This is what Nobel Prize- winning economist Paul Samuelson meant when he said that central planning in the United States would involve a mathematical problem with millions of unknowns and billions and billions of steps in its solution.

A third problem with most national planning proposals is their professed "voluntary nature". If a planning exercise is truly voluntary with no means for its implementation, then the whole exercise is pointless and would merely serve to swell government employment for economists. However, if the planning exercise is more than voluntary, then planning represents a genuine threat to the maintenance of a free society.

Supporters of planning claim they do not intend to tell General Electric or anyother firm precisely what to do. But what can be expected to happen if private firms are acting in ways that will defeat the aims of the national plan? Supporters of national planning greatly underestimate the governmental controls that their program would impose on the private economy.

There are some areas where the government must intrude in the marketplace because the market does not automatically allocate resources to meet national objectives. Recent examples include energy independence and environmental protection. But such area should be narrowly limited and specifically approved by the legislative process.

In short, we are for planning, lots of it, done principally by private entrepreneurs their own money at stake. The government has an important role to play in the economy and in helping private planners. It should provide consistent economic policies so indivíduals and businessmen can plan with some confidence in what the government will do.

Effective private planning requires a non-inflationary environment resulting from sound fiscal and monetary policies. The federal government should make available its forecast of future economic activity and should provide accurate statistics to assist the private planner. Not least, government must maintain a free and competitive marketplace. But government's primary interest should be in the process, not the plan.

CUBA AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

For a century and a half, the Monroe Doctrine was the most constant star in the firmament of our otherwise orbiting foreign policy.

It means that the United States laid its power and prestige on the line to prevent any European government from "controlling" the "destiny" of any Western Hemisphere nation.

After Fidel Castro took over Cuba, however, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, whose earthy vocabulary included frequent references to burying non-Communists, taunted us by saying: "Now the remains of this (Monroe) Doctrine should best be buried, as every dead body is, so that it does not poison the air by its decay."

It is now clear that that was no idle boast. Russia has converted Cuba into a Soviet military base for Communist subversion and aggression all over the world. Since Castro ruined the once-prosperous economy of Cuba, he has been sustained in power by Soviet subsidies totaling a half-billion dollars a year.

Unlike the United States, the Soviets exact their pound of flesh for their foreign aid. Today, some 7,000 Russians are effectively governing Cuba in the Stalinist pattern.

They train the secret police, run the military and the economy, dispatch troops to Angola, and direct Cuba's subversive and terrorist activities all over the Western Hemisphere, and even as far away as Austria and Iran. Cuban-trained terrorists are part of the Puerto Rican bomb throwers, the Argentinian murder-kidnap-ransom brigade, and the guerrilla agitators in the Dominican Republic.

More than 2,400 radicals from our country have visited Cuba to receive training for espionage and terrorist activity inside the United States.

Dangerous as is Cuba as a base for subversion, espionage, and terrorism, its potential as a Soviet missile and submarine base is far greater.

When our U-2 reconnaissance plane discovered Khrushchev's missiles in Cuba in 1962, we were able to make him remove them because we then had the capability to deliver more than 40,000 megatons of nuclear striking power on the Soviet Union. Toay, we can credibly threaten to deliver on Russia only about 5,000 megatons.

What will our president do next year if our intelligence reports that the present Soviet party boss, Leonid Brezhnev, has secretly installed his new SS-20 mobile nuclear missiles in Cuba aimed at vital American population targets? There is no threat that our President can hurl at Brezhnev that he cannot toss back at us, doubled in nuclear spades. Missiles fired from Cuba would reach our cities in about eight or nine minutes, as opposed to a 30-minute warning time for missiles launched from Russia.

Nor is there any credible threat that we can use to intimidate Castro. Recent evidence indicates that, even 13 years ago, he reacted to the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency's unsuccessful attempts to assassinate him by encouraging and perhaps even sponsoring the tragically successful assassination of President Kennedy.

Now Castro is flushed with victory after his Angolan conquest and ready to take on new challenges.

The big American mistake about Cuba was our abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine. We should revive that dying "body" before Brezhnev carries out Khrushchev's threat to bury it forever.

Bureaucrats Railroad Taxpayers

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The government overseers, who administer the billions that Congress appropriated to rehabilitate bankrupt railroads, are squandering the taxpayers money on themselves.

They voted themselves so many fringe benefits that one overseer, Treasury Undersecretary Jerry Thomas, raised a howl in the backrooms of the United States Railway Association. He shamed his colleagues into revoking permission to bill the government for their country club memberships. But they refused to repay the membership fees that the taxpayers had already shelled out.

The outraged Thomas, meanwhile, conducted a Treasury Department audit of the extravagances of the USRA administrators. Last week he confronted them behind closed doors with seven resolutions which would cut back their elaborate fringe benefits. All seven were defeated; four were never even seconded.

Then the offended board members passed a resolution, incredibly, chastising Thomas for trying to save the taxpayers' money. The resolution, adopted by a 7-to-2 vote, sharply rejected "the Undersecretary of Treasury's allegation of 'carte blanche use of the taxpayers' money' or a 'cavalier attitude with the public's tax dollars.'"

The board also took action to prevent Thomas from ever auditing their extravagances again. They voted that "no member of the board of directors is to undertake an independent audit of the Association without the approval of the board."

Congress established the United States Railway Association in 1973 to revitalize the ailing railroads in the 17 northeastern states. This is being accomplished with financial transfusions from the Treasury. But an excessive amount of money has been spent to maintain the lavish life-style of the administrators.

One of Chairman Arthur Lewis' first moves, for example, was to decree that the USRA's top brass should belong to "a private dining club in the Washington area." He also ruled, according to a May 21, 1974, confidential memo, that the USRA would pick up the membership fees and dues.

Lewis then set the example by enrolling in the exclusive Burning Tree Country Club. This set back the taxpayers $5,000 for initiation fees and $1,000 a year for dues. Seven other USRA officers happily joined the clubs of their choice to the tune of $13,550.

When Thomas joined the board in April, he was appalled at this misuse of taxpayers' money. He persuaded the board to rescind the club memberships. But when he followed up last week with a resolution requiring Lewis to pay back $5,000 for his Burning Tree membership, Thomas couldn't get anyone on the board to second the motion.

He also tried to cut back other extravagances that the Treasury Department audit had uncovered. The audit, written in the dull, factual language of the Treasury accountants, was circulated only to USRA bigwigs. But here are the highlights:

Representation Expenses -- During the first nine months of the 1976 fiscal year, USRA's top executives collected more than $35,000 for wining, dining and entertaining VIPs. After citing six pages of abuses, the auditors recommended reconsidering "whether funds could continue to be spent for official reception and representation purposes."

One of the biggest spenders again was Chairman Lewis, who didn't even bother to explain 69 of the 79 charges he submitted. He spent $726.71, for example, on dinners for 12 on two consecutive nights at Washington's prestigious Metropolitan Club. No explanations were given for the dinners.

But he threw another $778.55 party at the same club, according to his voucher, to "honor a number of USRA employees who had worked a considerable amount of overtime."

Relocation Allowances -- Lewis also authorized extravagant living expenses for USRA personnel who wanted to work in Washington without giving up their homes elsewhere. These allowances were higher than it would have cost them to resettle in Washington.

As usual, Lewis was one of the first to take advantage of his own policy. He has collected $26,000 to cover the high cost of living in Washington. This was added to the $63,000 salary he is already drawing -- the maximum, incidentally, allowed by Congress.

The living allowances are so lavish that 13 other USRA officers have also chosen to live in Washington at the taxpayers' expense and maintain separate homes elsewhere. This practice "would not have been allowed," the auditors notes, in other federal establishments. But Congress exempted USRA from the usual federal restrictions.

Consulting Contracts -- Under this remarkable policy, USRA officers can quit and still stay on the payroll as consultants. They are paid a lump sum for the contract period, usually three months, no matter how much time they actually put in.

One vice president, for example, collected $13,650 for only six days of work. That comes out to $2,275 per day.

The report also condemns other, lesser extravagances. The taxpayers are stuck, for example, with the traffic fines that USRA bigwigs incur in the line of duty. These have included fines for speeding. "Several of the traffic violations," the audit report adds, "were incurred by drivers while picking up newspapers for the chairman and former president."

Yet the board voted to continue all these extravagances and to reprimand the man who tried to blow the whistle.

Unemployment up 2nd month in row

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment increased for the second month in a row in July, rising from 7.5 to 7.8 per cent, and leaving more people out of work than at any time in the past seven months, the government said today.

At the same time, however, the Labor Department said about 400,000 more people found jobs in July, pushing total employment to a record 87.9 million.

But the pickup in hiring since the recession has apparently lured into the job market thousards of workers, particularly adult women, who hadn't bothered to look for a job when times were tight.

The number of people without jobs in July rose 280,000 to 7.4 million, the most since 7.8 million couldn't find work in December. The 7.8 per cent unemployment was the highest since an identical level in January.

The 7.5 per cent unemployment rate in June was an increase over the 7.3 per cent level in May. The June-July increases represent a threat to the administration's projections that unemployment will slip below 7 per cent by December.

There were fewer people unemployed in January than there are now, but the unemployment rates were the same because the labor force is constantly growing.

The work force has grown by 2.3 million, or 2.5 per cent, in the past year. Part of that is accounted for by normal population growth, but the rate is far above the eight-tenths of a per cent growth in the total population last year.

The bulk of the growth in the labor force — 1.4 million — has been among adult women, even though they represent less than a third of the total work force. The percentage of working-age women at work or seeking a job has risen to 47.4 per cent from 46.1 per cent a year ago.

The number of women in the work force has traditionally been considered a signal of the pressure families feel for beefing up their incomes. And economists still consider that to be a factor, but in recent years demographers have found a surge in womens' work force participation rates unrelated to underlying economic conditions.

The unemployment rate for adult women in July was 7.6 per cent, up from 7.1 per cent in June. Adult male unemployment was 6.1 per cent, compared to 6 per cent the previous month.

Unemployment among household heads climbed to 5.4 per cent from 5.1 per cent.

Unemployment among blacks and teen-agers improved, but analysts said the rates remain so high that the change isn't likely to signal any dramatic improvement. Unemployment among teen-agers slipped to 18.1 per cent from 18.4 per cent. Among blacks the rate fell from 13.3 per cent to 12.9 per cent.

Littons buried today

CHILLICOTHE, Mo. (AP) — Congressman Jerry Litton, killed in a plane crash on the eve of being elected Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate, was buried today with his wife and two children who died with him, mourned by neighbors and notables alike.

Meanwhile, authorities probed the cause of a plane crash that killed him and five other persons on takeoff from Chillicothe to Kansas City where he was to have celebrated his victory in Tuesday's Missouri primary.

About 60 dignitaries from Washington, including White House, congressional and military representatives, were among those expected at the United Methodist Church for the funeral of Litton, 39, his wife, Sharon, 38, and their children, Scott, 12, and Linda, 13.

Paul Rupp Jr., the 44-year-old pilot and friend of Litton's, and his son, Paul III, also were killed in the crash Tuesday night.

The Rupp funeral was held earlier today. Results of an autopsy on Rupp would take several weeks, Tom Otke, Livingston County coroner, said.

The pallbearers for Litton were Edwin Turner, C.P. Hutchison and Charles Reed, all of Chillicothe, Dev O'Neil of Washington, Lowell Mohler of Jefferson City and William Powell of Princeton, Mo.

Pallbearers for Mrs. Litton were Don Chapman, Ken Hardin, Ken Churchill and Pat Crabtree, all of Chillicothe, Don Schooler, of Brookfield, Mo., and Al Cohen of Kansas City.

Security remained tight around the crash site Thursday, but was removed after the wreckage was transferred to an airport hangar.

The Highway Patrol took extra precautions today in anticipation of sightseers. Traffic was heavy Thursday along U.S. 36, where curious motorists tried to get a good look at the wreckage, just off the highway.

Thankful to be alive

Sikeston family caught in Colorado flash flood

By RON PORTER

Call it divine intervention, fate or just plain luck, but it finally comes down to this: The engine on their motor home died, and so the Larry Steward family did not.

The Stewards, who live at 102 Goldbirer, were driving along Highway 34 in Big Thompson Canyon near Loveland, Colo., Saturday night when a flash flood swept down the canyon, killing a still undetermined number of people.

The four of them — Larry, his wife Shirley, daughter Stephania, 8, and son Stepahn, 4 were on a vacation trip through the mountain states when they found themselves traveling through Big Thompson Canyon on a short cut from the Yellowstone Grand Teton area to Denver.

They flew back to Sikeston Tuesday with little more than the clothes on their backs, thankful to be alive.

It started raining about 8 p.m. Saturday, but Steward said they were not concerned.

"It wasn't even a good Sikeston rain," he said, then added, "but for every quarter of a mile we progressed, it got 20 per cent more intense. Still, it rains harder in Sikeston."

Then, as their motor home started up a hill, a rock slide tumbled across their path. They could not back up because they were pulling a motorcycle trailer and there were cars behind them, so they tried to drive over the rocks.

The water rushing down the rock slide hit the big yellow motor home and the engine died. Steward restarted the engine and tried again to get over the rocks. Again the engine died.

Others behind them were impatient and passed, including a large motor home. The motor home struck the Steward's motorcycle trailer and began to slide off the road toward the river. The driver swung back onto the road and struck the Stewards' motor home in the side.

The driver kept on going and did not stop. The Stewards later learned that motor home was washed away in the flood.

Steward finally restarted the engine and managed to drive to a wide spot on the road where he stopped and walked back to look at the damaged motorcycle carrier.

It was so badly damaged they had to leave it there, Steward said, planning to call for a wrecker to get it later. That was the last time they saw their motorcycles.

They decided to say where they were for awhile. "Things started to get worse and worse and to rain harder and harder," Steward said.

Still, the thought of the river endangering them was the last thing on their minds. They were parked 20 to 30 feet above the banks.

They had no way of knowing that a 12- foot high wall of water was coming down the canyon toward them and that it would leave a path of destruction 30 miles long.

"The thing that concerned us was that the place where we were parked was gradually becoming a river with water rushing down the highway," Steward said. He said they worried about a log or rock coming down the road and striking the motor home.

"We were not concerned about the river, but about the motor home," Mrs. Steward said. "We were afraid it might go floating off the road. We had no idea the road was caving in."

That is just what the road was doing. A car that went by them returned a minute later because the road was washed out just 50 feet around the bend. About the same distance behind, the road was also gone.

Five vehicles, containing 14 people, were stranded on the small section of remaining highway. By now, Steward had pulled the motor home back up onto the road to get away from the water on the edge of the highway.

It did not help much. They watched as a man struggled to get back into his camper, also parked on the road. The water was up to the man's waist.

They still were not concerned about the creek. But then someone in the car ahead flashed a light out into the canyon and there was the river, now just a few feet below the highway.

They said that was when they realized just how much trouble they were in.

"By the time it dawned on us what was happening, for many people it was too late," Steward said.

Mrs. Steward opened the door to look out and water started

Cyclist killed in crash

A rural East Prairie man was killed and three persons received minor injuries in three area traffic accidents Thursday and early today, according to the highway patrol. The fatality was the 67th on Southeast Missouri roads this year compared to 61 at the same time last year.

William Randolph Barker, 27, of East Prairie Route Two was pronounced dead at the scene of a motorcycle accident which occurred at 12:35 a.m. today on Highway 80 half a mile east of East Prairie.

According to the patrol, Barker's westbound motorcycle struck a guard rail while traveling at a high rate of speed, throwing Barker from the vehicle into a bridge embankment. The patrol report indicated he was not wearing a motorcycle helmet. The motorcycle continued to skid across the bridge and struck a parked vehicle.

Barker was born May 8, 1949 in Cairo, Ill., son of Mrs. Opal Marie Morgan Barker of rural East Prairie and the late Ben Barker.

A resident of Mississippi County all of his life, he was employed by National Lock & Key Co. at Sikeston, and was a member of Nelson Memorial United Methodist Church.

He was a Navy veteran of the Vietnam War.

In addition to his mother, survivors include: three brothers, Sam Barker of East Prairie, William Barker of Charleston and Harry Blaine Barker of Dexter; and three sisters, Mrs. Carline Ruth Smithson of Sunnyvale, Calif., Mrs. Mera Ben Bess of St. Louis and Mrs. Eugenia Adkison of East Prairie.

Friends may call after 6 p.m. today at Shelby Funeral Home in East Prairie, where services are scheduled at 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The Rev. Jim Norris, pastor of Nelson Memorial United Methodist Church, will officiate.

Burial will follow in IOOF Cemetery near Charleston.

Killer disease not flu

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) - Scientists today elimiated influenza and fungi as possible causes of the mysterious "legionnaires' disease." They said test results point toward a toxic substance as a cause for the disease that has claimed 25 lives.

"The epidemic has peaked and is on its way out," Dr. David Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta told a news conference.

Researchers admitted, however, that they still haven't been able to identify the specific cause of the disease despite four days of tests in a state laboratory in Philadelphia and the CDC.

"What we know is really what we don't know. It is possible we'll never know," Sencer told an Atlanta news conference.

But "I think all of us can breathe a sigh of relief that this is not flu," he said.

He added, "We still have no firm evidence of any secondary transmission," meaning the disease is not contagious.

"Unfortunately, people are still dying," Sencer said. "There are 25 dead and 153 cases, but the number is coming down."

The toll rose to 25 today, up from two from the earlier count of 23.

Sencer added that chemistry tests for toxic agents are more complicated than those which have eliminated influenza as a possible cause and that he could not say when results of the tests might show what kind of toxin caused the illness.

Sencer said the toxin could have come from a chemical present in everyday materials such as plastics or paper.

"There are a wide variety of agents — pesticides, fungicides, organic phosphorous agents or heavy metals" that could act as a toxin, he said.

All the persons who got the disease in the past two weeks attended a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia last month.

Robert A. Wright, president of the association, presented the financial report to the membership and complimented them on their patronage of the association over the years. He announced that effective Aug. 1, the interest rate has been reduced to 7¾ per cent, which is the lowest point interest has reached since April, 1973. He stated that the loan volume has more than doubled in the last five years.

Teenager is charged with manslaughter

DEXTER — A local teenager, 17-year-old Loren Dale Sielert, was arrested and charged with manslaughter Tuesday in connection with the traffic death of a Dexter woman and her young daughter.

Marva D. Gromer, 25, of Dexter, and her 3-year-old daughter, Billie Jo, were killed at 12:05 a.m. July 28 when a station wagon driven by Mrs. Gromer collided head on with a pickup truck driven by Seilert.

The accident occurred on Route AD two miles north of town when Seilert's truck "failed to keep to the right side of the road," the highway patrol investigation report said.

Seilert posted $2,500 bond following his arrest and arraingment in Stoddard County Magistrate Court Tuesday afternoon, authorities said.

Two passengers in the Gromer car were seriously injured in the accident. Mrs. Gromer's other daughter, Angela, 5, and sister, Lillie Foster, 28, of Dexter, were taken to the Dexter Memorial Hospital suffering serious injuries, the patrol said.

Seilert suffered minor injuries in the accident. A passenger in his truck, 17-year-old Linda Phillips of Puxico, also suffered minor injuries, the patrol reported.

THE HORNET'S NEST

According to the Associated Press news dispatch, the "seemingly routine" HEW order banning traditional father-son, mother-daughter school functions has "stirred a hornet's nest of national protestation." And it is further reported that the President was "shocked" by the HEW letter and ordered it reviewed.

But why in the world should the President be "shocked"? After all, the HEW bureaucrats can argue (not without substantial justification) that they were simply following the law prescribed by Congress, specifically,the infamous "Title IX" of the 1972 Civil Rights Act which states: "Any aid, benefit, or service to a student shall not, on the basis of sex, subject any person to separate or different rules of behavior, sanctions or other treatment."

Not only that, but two of the leading Presidential candidates — Mr. Ford and Mr. Carter — have declared that they favor ratification of the radical so-called "Equal Rights Amendment" to the Constitution, which goes far beyond the controversial Title IX. The proposed "ERA" Amendment would, if ratified, not only apply to students, as does Title IX; it would apply to every living soul, male and female, from cradle to grave.

Specifically, the Amendment reads: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." There are no "ifs," no "ands," no "buts"; no exceptions of any kind or description. No more father- son banquets. No more mother- daughter functions. No boys schools. No girls schools. No more Young Men's Christian Association. No more Young Women's Christian Association. No longer will a wife be permitted to stay home as a wife and mother and then, in retirement years, collect social security payments on money earned by her husband — that would be "unequal treatment." All women must be brought down to the level of men.

You doubt it? The militantly radical "NOW" group (National Organization For Women) which aggressively promotes passage of ERA, totally supports the HEW letter. "Such father- son gatherings perpetuate harmful sexual stereotypes," was the official "NOW" response.

Was the HEW action stupid? No more so than the stupidity of the "liberal" Congress which agreed with the "NOW" philosophy and passed Title IX into law.

In the last analysis, the father - son, mother- daughter fiasco goes right back to the American electorate. Clearly, better judgment must be exercised in casting votes. And this year, above all years, every single eligible voter must vow, now, not only to vote in the forthcoming elections, but to vote selectively and intelligently.

WHERE THE HORSES AND BURROS ROAM

From The Washington Post

When Congress passed the Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act five years ago, it seemed that a blanket of federal protection had been placed over those animals which are regarded as elusive friends by lovers of nature—and as foes by many ranchers in the West. Unfortunately, the blanket never settled.

Opposition to the law was widespread; wild horses continued to be trapped and slaughtered; and, eventually, a federal court in New Mexico held the act to be unconstitutional. The court said that the Constitution gives Congress power to regulate wild animals and public lands only to protect the land and not to protect the animals themselves.

The Supreme Court has now reversed this decision. It asserted that Congress does indeed have power to regulate and protect the wildlife living on public lands. That is not just good news for horses and burros—it is also good news for the country.

The high court's ruling removes any legal question about the right of the Federal Government to maintain some parts of the country in their natural state. And it turns back an attack on other federal wildlife protective laws, which would have been sure to come if the lower court had been upheld. Not all such laws are popular, of course, in every part of the country. Some are seen as unwise by the wildlife's human neighbors who often regard the animals as pure pests.

The case is also a useful reminder that federalism is still a large element in the manner in which the country is governed. The claim made by New Mexico that Congress was trying to usurp a part of its inherent power was not frivolous. The states have always had the major role in regulating wildlife and are likely to continue to have it.

The court upheld only that part of the wild horses act which protects the animals while they are on public land; it put off for another case the constitutionality of the protection the act gives to those animals when they roam onto private or state-owned land. We would not bet much on their chances there—either in fact or in court. So we wish that—some way or other—these survivors of the past who wander free in the West could get the message: Stay on Uncle Sam's land, he'll protect you.

One week before Christmas last year, Connecticut was hit by a storm which gained the honor of being the worst ice storm in memory. Over a quarter of a million households were without electrical power or heat. In many houses there was no water. Freezing temperatures drove families to emergency shelters. In some areas, five or six days passed before the lights came on.

When we returned home six days later, there was one holiday greeting card waiting in the mailbox. It read:

My father and a co-worker were making repairs on a rooftop antenna of a state office building. Having no keys to the roof's door, the men left it swinging open. But the blustery wind soon slammed it closed, stranding the men on the roof of the five-story building.

Efforts to get the attention of passing pedestrians and motorists proved futile. My father, a follower of "There's got to be an easier way," preferred to think his way out of the predicament. Eyeing the American flag flying from the building's rooftop flagpole, he arrived at a plan. Dad took down the flag and re-hoisted it, upside down, as a sign of distress. A passing pedestrian noticed it and reported the "mistake" to building authorities.

THE NEW KING-MAKERS

Ever since the campaign reform act was passed, we have been wondering who would end up with the political power the law takes away from wealthy people by severe limits on the size of political contributions. We are now starting to discern the answer. The new political king-makers will be rock musicians.

The eye-opener in this respect was the California senatorial bid by Tom Hayden, ex-student radical and Mrs. Jane Fonda. In the end, Senator John Tunney put down the upstart primary challenge, but not before Mr. Hayden's well financed campaign put quite a scare into regular California Democrats.

Mr. Hayden's campaign was graced by benefit performances by seven rock stars; the events raised $75,000, or 10 per cent of the cost of the campaign. A fellow named Jackson Brown, whose singing and guitar playing holds special charm for Southern Californians, gave a couple hours of his time, attracted 10,000 people and raised $30,000 for Mr. Hayden.

The idea is spreading, with other Californians naturally in the lead. Governor Jerry Brown's quixotic presidential campaign has been boosted by the same Jackson Brown, as well as Linda Ronstadt and The Eagles. Jimmy Carter, meanwhile, landed the Allman Brothers, a rock group with, naturally, a country flavor.

Under the campaign reform act Stewart Mott, rich heir, can give candidate Hayden only $1,000. How come Jackson Brown, rock star, can give him $30,000? Good question.

Well, you see, the act makes no limits on contributions of time. Suzi Coed can stuff envelopes for her hero for as many hours as she likes. An advisory opinion from the Federal Election Commission holds that Jackson Brown is only giving time. He is doing what Suzi Coed does, not what Stewart Mott does. Now you tell one.

A spokesperson for the FEC says that a doctor or lawyer could definitely not give five free hours of eye surgery or merger advice with the proceeds going to a candidate. If a complaint about the rock musicians comes along, she says, the commission may have to "evaluate" it again.

So we can see the loophole being closed with a ruling parsing out the per-hour value of contributions of time: 1,000 hours at $1 an hour for Suzi Coed, for minutes at $15,000 an hour for Jackson Brown. This of course opens endless further questions: Must Suzi be evaluated at the same point, someone might even decide the law is pretty silly to begin with.

For symbolic reasons, though, we rather like the law as it is, loop-hole and all. Somehow it is a monument to the current reformist mentality to have a law that reduces the political impact of property and enhances the political impact of rock stars.—Wall Street Journal

P.S. TO THE NEWS

CUBA AND THE MONROE DOCTRINE

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

For a century and a half, the Monroe Doctrine was the most constant star in the firmament of our otherwise orbiting foreign policy.

It means that the United States laid its power and prestige on the line to prevent any European government from "controlling" the "destiny" of any Western Hemisphere nation.

After Fidel Castro took over Cuba, however, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, whose earthy vocabulary included frequent references to burying non-Communists, taunted us by saying: "Now the remains of this (Monroe) Doctrine should best be buried, as every dead body is, so that it does not poison the air by its decay."

It is now clear that that was no idle boast. Russia has converted Cuba into a Soviet military base for Communist subversion and aggression all over the world. Since Castro ruined the once-prosperous economy of Cuba, he has been sustained in power by Soviet subsidies totaling a half-billion dollars a year.

Unlike the United States, the Soviets exact their pound of flesh for their foreign aid. Today, some 7,000 Russians are effectively governing Cuba in the Stalinist pattern.

They train the secret police, run the military and the economy, dispatch troops to Angola, and direct Cuba's subversive and terrorist activities all over the Western Hemisphere, and even as far away as Austria and Iran. Cuban-trained terrorists are part of the Puerto Rican bomb throwers, the Argentinian murder-kidnap-ransom brigade, and the guerrilla agitators in the Dominican Republic.

More than 2,400 radicals from our country have visited Cuba to receive training for espionage and terrorist activity inside the United States.

Dangerous as is Cuba as a base for subversion, espionage, and terrorism, its potential as a Soviet missile and submarine base is far greater.

When our U-2 reconnaissance plane discovered Khrushchev's missiles in Cuba in 1962, we were able to make him remove them because we then had the capability to deliver more than 40,000 megatons of nuclear striking power on the Soviet Union. Toay, we can credibly threaten to deliver on Russia only about 5,000 megatons.

What will our president do next year if our intelligence reports that the present Soviet party boss, Leonid Brezhnev, has secretly installed his new SS-20 mobile nuclear missiles in Cuba aimed at vital American population targets? There is no threat that our President can hurl at Brezhnev that he cannot toss back at us, doubled in nuclear spades. Missiles fired from Cuba would reach our cities in about eight or nine minutes, as opposed to a 30-minute warning time for missiles launched from Russia.

Nor is there any credible threat that we can use to intimidate Castro. Recent evidence indicates that, even 13 years ago, he reacted to the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency's unsuccessful attempts to assassinate him by encouraging and perhaps even sponsoring the tragically successful assassination of President Kennedy.

Now Castro is flushed with victory after his Angolan conquest and ready to take on new challenges.

The big American mistake about Cuba was our abandonment of the Monroe Doctrine. We should revive that dying "body" before Brezhnev carries out Khrushchev's threat to bury it forever.

Planning and the American Economy – An Inside White House View

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is recognized in White House circles as the man closest to his old friend Jerry Ford -- and possibly the most knowledgeable economic policy spokesman for the President.

By L. WILLIAM SEIDEMAN
Assistant to the President for Economic Affairs

WASHINGTON D. C. — The United States has the most planned economy in the world. At first blush, such an assertion by an admirer of Adam Smith strikes many as incredible. In fact, it has been said that we in the Ford administration are so opposed to planning that we consider Adam Smith's "invisible hand" to be an unwarranted intrusion in the marketplace.

But further reflection reveals not only the accuracy of the claim that the United States is the world's most planned economy, but the rationale behind it.

Millions of business men and farmers do the principal job of planning in the United States. Many nations have more national governmental economic planning; but attempts to centrally direct economic activity should not necessarily be considered as evidence of more planning. Some planning occurs in every economic system. The crucial variable is whether the planning is concentrated in the public or private sector.

Periods of recession always seem to produce proposals for national governmental economic planning as a means of correcting the imperfections of the free market. Our recent recession was no exception. Proponents of national planning have coalesced around two proposed bills, the Balanced Growth and Economic Planning Act of 1975 (the Humphrey-Javits bill) and the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act of 1976 (the Humphrey- Hawkins bill).

Earlier this year the Joint Economic Committee of the Congress also issued a majority report calling for comprehensive long- range planning. More recently, the proposed Democratic party platform called for national economic planning.

The renewed interest in national economic planning stems in part from those who wish to use it as a vehicle for implementing their vision of how society should be structured. They are not satisfied with the allocation of resources that result from the market. Irving Kristol has perceptively observed, they want the "power which in a capitalist system is supposed to reside in the free market."

Indeed, this is precisely what central planning is all about – making decisions about the allocation of resources by a few individuals at the center rather than permitting participation by all the people through allocation by the market.

Even assuming a national economic plan were desirable, there are major difficulties with such an exercise in the United States. First, long- range planning, if it is to be effective, requires accurate forecasting. How could an economic planning board know where to allocate capital how much to raise or reduce taxes, or otherwise direct the economy without accurate forecasting?

Forecasting, even in the shortrun, is difficult. Despite considerable effort, economists have had a disappointing track record in forecasting the future, particulary for an extended period.

Getting an accurate forecast is a minor problem compared with a second difficulty that would then face a central planning board. If the board were to have any value, it would be forced to make decisions for thousands of industries, millions of firms, and numerous governmental units at incredible speed and under constantly changing conditions. This is what Nobel Prize- winning economist Paul Samuelson meant when he said that central planning in the United States would involve a mathematical problem with millions of unknowns and billions and billions of steps in its solution.

A third problem with most national planning proposals is their professed "voluntary nature". If a planning exercise is truly voluntary with no means for its implementation, then the whole exercise is pointless and would merely serve to swell government employment for economists. However, if the planning exercise is more than voluntary, then planning represents a genuine threat to the maintenance of a free society.

Supporters of planning claim they do not intend to tell General Electric or anyother firm precisely what to do. But what can be expected to happen if private firms are acting in ways that will defeat the aims of the national plan? Supporters of national planning greatly underestimate the governmental controls that their program would impose on the private economy.

There are some areas where the government must intrude in the marketplace because the market does not automatically allocate resources to meet national objectives. Recent examples include energy independence and environmental protection. But such area should be narrowly limited and specifically approved by the legislative process.

In short, we are for planning, lots of it, done principally by private entrepreneurs their own money at stake. The government has an important role to play in the economy and in helping private planners. It should provide consistent economic policies so individuals and businessmen can plan with some confidence in what the government will do.

Effective private planning requires a non-inflationary environment resulting from sound fiscal and monetary policies. The federal government should make available its forecast of future economic activity and should provide accurate statistics to assist the private planner. Not least, government must maintain a free and competitive marketplace. But government's primary interest should be in the process, not the plan.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Bureaucrats Railroad Taxpayers

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The government overseers, who administer the billions that Congress appropriated to rehabilitate bankrupt railroads, are squandering the taxpayers money on themselves.

They voted themselves so many fringe benefits that one overseer, Treasury Undersecretary Jerry Thomas, raised a howl in the backrooms of the United States Railway Association. He shamed his colleagues into revoking permission to bill the government for their country club memberships. But they refused to repay the membership fees that the taxpayers had already shelled out.

The outraged Thomas, meanwhile, conducted a Treasury Department audit of the extravagances of the USRA administrators. Last week he confronted them behind closed doors with seven resolutions which would cut back their elaborate fringe benefits. All seven were defeated; four were never even seconded.

Then the offended board members passed a resolution, incredibly, chastising Thomas for trying to save the taxpayers' money. The resolution, adopted by a 7-to-2 vote, sharply rejected "the Undersecretary of Treasury's allegation of 'carte blanche use of the taxpayers' money' or a 'cavalier attitude with the public's tax dollars.'"

The board also took action to prevent Thomas from ever auditing their extravagances again. They voted that "no member of the board of directors is to undertake an independent audit of the Association without the approval of the board."

Congress established the United States Railway Association in 1973 to revitalize the ailing railroads in the 17 northeastern states. This is being accomplished with financial transfusions from the Treasury. But an excessive amount of money has been spent to maintain the lavish life-style of the administrators.

One of Chairman Arthur Lewis' first moves, for example, was to decree that the USRA's top brass should belong to "a private dining club in the Washington area." He also ruled, according to a May 21, 1974, confidential memo, that the USRA would pick up the membership fees and dues.

Lewis then set the example by enrolling in the exclusive Burning Tree Country Club. This set back the taxpayers $5,000 for initiation fees and $1,000 a year for dues. Seven other USRA officers happily joined the clubs of their choice to the tune of $13,550.

When Thomas joined the board in April, he was appalled at this misuse of taxpayers' money. He persuaded the board to rescind the club memberships. But when he followed up last week with a resolution requiring Lewis to pay back $5,000 for his Burning Tree membership, Thomas couldn't get anyone on the board to second the motion.

He also tried to cut back other extravagances that the Treasury Department audit had uncovered. The audit, written in the dull, factual language of the Treasury accountants, was circulated only to USRA bigwigs. But here are the highlights:

Representation Expenses -- During the first nine months of the 1976 fiscal year, USRA's top executives collected more than $35,000 for wining, dining and entertaining VIPs. After citing six pages of abuses, the auditors recommended reconsidering "whether funds could continue to be spent for official reception and representation purposes."

One of the biggest spenders again was Chairman Lewis, who didn't even bother to explain 69 of the 79 charges he submitted. He spent $726.71, for example, on dinners for 12 on two consecutive nights at Washington's prestigious Metropolitan Club. No explanations were given for the dinners.

But he threw another $778.55 party at the same club, according to his voucher, to "honor a number of USRA employees who had worked a considerable amount of overtime."

Relocation Allowances -- Lewis also authorized extravagant living expenses for USRA personnel who wanted to work in Washington without giving up their homes elsewhere. These allowances were higher than it would have cost them to resettle in Washington.

As usual, Lewis was one of the first to take advantage of his own policy. He has collected $26,000 to cover the high cost of living in Washington. This was added to the $63,000 salary he is already drawing -- the maximum, incidentally, allowed by Congress.

The living allowances are so lavish that 13 other USRA officers have also chosen to live in Washington at the taxpayers' expense and maintain separate homes elsewhere. This practice "would not have been allowed," the auditors notes, in other federal establishments. But Congress exempted USRA from the usual federal restrictions.

Consulting Contracts -- Under this remarkable policy, USRA officers can quit and still stay on the payroll as consultants. They are paid a lump sum for the contract period, usually three months, no matter how much time they actually put in.

One vice president, for example, collected $13,650 for only six days of work. That comes out to $2,275 per day.

The report also condemns other, lesser extravagances. The taxpayers are stuck, for example, with the traffic fines that USRA bigwigs incur in the line of duty. These have included fines for speeding. "Several of the traffic violations," the audit report adds, "were incurred by drivers while picking up newspapers for the chairman and former president."

Yet the board voted to continue all these extravagances and to reprimand the man who tried to blow the whistle.

"more spice than everything nice"

High blood pressure is a killer

Many of us think that high blood pressure is caused by stress. In most cases, however, doctors don't know what causes high blood pressure. What they do know is that high blood pressure is a killer.

It can bring on heart failure, kidney damage or stroke. And nearly half the people who have high blood pressure are women. A woman's chances of having high blood pressure become greater than a man's as she gets older, especially after menopause.

To help women learn what factors can affect high blood pressure and how it is treated, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has made available a new publication. For a single free copy of What Every Woman Should Know About High Blood Pressure, write the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 39, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Before you let your doctor prescribe birth control pills, have your blood pressure checked. And, if you're already taking "the pill," have your blood pressure checked every six months or so. Contraceptive drugs can cause high blood pressure in some women. This is more likely to happen if you have mild kidney disease, or a family history of high blood pressure.

Doctors always keep a close watch on a woman's blood pressure during pregnancy because some women who have never had high blood pressure may develop it rapidly toward the end of pregnancy. Pregnancy can make high blood pressure m ore severe in women who already have it. High blood pressur associated with pregnancy usually disappears after delivery.

Nobody knows why, but studies show that black women, even very young black women, are much more susceptible to high blood pressure than white women. Not only is the disease more common among black women, but it often tends to be m ore serious.

If there's a history of high blood pressure in your family, there's a good chance that you have it or may develop it. If you have it, it's quite possible that your children may develop it. Like adults, children should have regular blood pressure checks. Having your blood pressure checked is a quick and painless process.

If you are found to have high blood pressure, you may be advised to lose weight, and use less salt. If it is very high, medication may be prescribed.

What Every Woman Should Know About High Blood Pressure (free) is one of more then 250 selected Federal publications listed in the Fall edition of the catalgo, Consumer Information. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Service Administration, the catalog is available free from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

3 tablespoons flour blended with 3 tablespoons water

Rub a mixture of the salt pepper and 1 teaspoon of the dillweed over the beef; place in an electric slow-cooker. Stir together the wine and vinegar and add. Cook, covered, on low until tender — about 9 hours. Remove beef. Pour hot meat juice in slow cooker — there will be a generous pintful — into a 10-inch skillet. Gradually stir sour cream into flour-water mixture, keeping smooth; stir into skillet with remaining dillweed; cook gently, stirring constantly, until thickened and boiling. Slice meat thin (this is easiest to do if it is chilled); add to sauce and reheat. Serve with noodles. Makes 6 servings.

Ann Landers

Ann's 'nasal twang' elicits comments

Dear Ann Landers: Saw you on the Tonight Show with Barbara Walters hosting in place of Johnny Carson. You really are a nifty dancer but then, Ray Bolger could make anybody look good.

I loved your white dress with the rows of fringe. Did you make it yourself?

I have also seen your sister, Dear Abby, on the Tonight Show, and she, too, is darling. But I wish you girls would keep your mouths shut.

What in the world is wrong with your voices? You both have the same speech impediment. You could both use a good speech therapist. Have you ever heard a playback of yourselves? That rasping, irritating nasal twang CAN be corrected. Please don't blame it on Iowa. I was raised in Des Moines and I don't sound as if I am talking through two sets of false teeth.

Someone should level with you, and your best friend Barbara Walters won't because she doesn't sound a hell of a lot better. Sign me -- Sore Ears From Houston Who Tells It Like It Is

Dear Ears: Thanks for your warm comments. Glad you liked my dress. No, I didn't make it myself. Bill Blass deserves the credit.

As for that rasping, irritating, nasal twang -- nobody's perfect. In the meantime, Barbara Walters will soon be making a million clams a year with her "impediment." Eat your heart out, Houston.

Dear Ann Landers: I was disturbed by the reply you gave the 11-year-old girl who asked if she could get pregnant before she started to menstruate. You said no.

I'm a registered nurse who works in labor-delivery. I've cared for four 11- and 12-year-olds who became pregnant before the onset of their periods. These girls happened to have intercourse at the time of their first ovulation and got caught. Please change your answer. It would be awful if that youngster started to fool around because of you.

A similar occurrence is the new mother who gets pregnant before her six-week check-up, assuming she is "safe" because she has not resumed her menstrual cycle.

Pre-teens and women who have two babies in one year make rotten patients. We don't want 'em. -- O.B. Nurse In Sgfld.

Dear Nurse: You are right. I was wrong. That answer was one of the worst I have ever given and I am ashamed of myself. Dozens of doctors and nurses wrote to set me straight and so did several teenagers. It's sackcloth and ashes for me these next 30 days.

Dear Ann: I've seen several letters to the editor and comments by other columnists who doubted your survey which reported 70 per cent of the parents who responded would NOT have had children if they had it to do over again.

Recently my husband and I watched a dear friend, a fine, decent, caring person, destroyed by her daughter. When we see what others are going through with their kids we are glad we were not "blessed" with a family -- and there are many more like us. -- Anonymus -- Of Course

Dear Anon: The cloak of anonymity brings out the truth like nothing else. Thanks for writing.

African Culture Weekend to begin

NEW MADRID — An African Culture Weekend, sponsored by Beebe Memorial Christian Methodist Episocpal Church, 205 Riley St., will get under way tonight at 7:30 with a dinner in the old O'Bannon School cafeteria and soft music afterward to entertain the guests.

Saturday's program in the new Community Building at 7 p.m. will feature African students from Rust College in Holly Springs, Miss., who will speak of their culture and display some of their arts from Africa.

The african students will close the program by playing African and American records and performing in both African and American traditions.

The Rev. McDonald Chrysistom, an African minister of Souther Mission Baptist Church in St. Louis, will be the guest speaker for a program Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at Beebe Memorial CME Church.

Laverne Chrysistom, sister of the Rev. Joseph Buckner and a well known recording artist from St. Louis, will sing a number of selections.

The weekend program is open to the public, and is one of a series to assist underprivileged students to attend college.

Teenager is charged with manslaughter

DEXTER — A local teenager, 17-year-old Loren Dale Sielert, was arrested and charged with manslaughter Tuesday in connection with the traffic death of a Dexter woman and her young daughter.

Marva D. Gromer, 25, of Dexter, and her 3-year-old daughter, Billie Jo, were killed at 12:05 a.m. July 28 when a station wagon driven by Mrs. Gromer collided head on with a pickup truck driven by Seilert.

The accident occurred on Route AD two miles north of town when Seilert's truck "failed to keep to the right side of the road," the highway patrol investigation report said.

Seilert posted $2,500 bond following his arrest and arraingment in Stoddard County Magistrate Court Tuesday afternoon, authorities said.

Two passengers in the Gromer car were seriously injured in the accident. Mrs. Gromer's other daughter, Angela, 5, and sister, Lillie Foster, 28, of Dexter, were taken to the Dexter Memorial Hospital suffering serious injuries, the patrol said.

Seilert suffered minor injuries in the accident. A passenger in his truck, 17-year-old Linda Phillips of Puxico, also suffered minor injuries, the patrol reported.

Bus drivers' intuition saves 35 lives

NEW ALBANY, Ind. (AP) — Jim Shoots doesn't know it yet, but he'll receive a hero's welcome when his bus loaded with 35 school children and nine adult counselors arrives in this southern Indiana town.

And Shoots — credited by townsfolk with saving the lives of those on his bus — probably won't like it, says Bob Holmes, superintendent of New Albany-Floyd County schools.

Holmes said Shoots was driving the bus through Big Thompson Canyon in Colorado last Saturday night when he sensed that something was wrong.

How to get mileage from a pattern

Sometimes a pattern turns out to be just right for you — it has the perfect fit and look and you absolutely love it. How can you make it more versatile? By taking a basic shirt pattern, Glamour Magazine shows you how to sew several great-looking things from your perfect pattern. Here are a few ways to get more mileage from it:

Make it hip-length to wear over pants.

Cut it below the knee to use as a dress, or again as a tunic over pants.

Make it into a long caftan for at-home, and a sleep shirt as well.

Create a shirttail effect by leaving the side seams open and rounding the edges.

Cut it short to hit your waist and wear it over pants.

Layer it over itself using a heavier fabric outside and shirting-weight underneath. (You might cut the overshirt just a bit larger.) Make it flannel or gauze.

A piece as versatile as this is a perfect weekend wardrobe by itself. Just add different accessories and layers and it can take you from day into evening, from the beach in summer to dinner in the city.

It can look sophisticated when it hangs loosely over pants, casual under a vest, wrapping your waist with a soft tie belt.

TIPS

If you are adding length to the pattern or making a longer length than the pattern envelope calls for — simply lay out the pattern and make a tissue paper extension for the desired length. Measure this to find the extra yardage needed.

Don't make the mistake of using your favorite pattern in one season only. Many can work equally well all year round. Try crisp shirting stripes with a white cotton for summer, flannel plaids therough winter for shirt styles. Try sportswear fabrics for day and silks and velvets for evenings.

The first time you make your perfect pattern, remember to note all your adjustments on the tissue pattern itself. This will make it much easier to put together the next time.

Although you may have made up this pattern before, remember that all fabrics will react differently to the same pattern. A heavier or bulkier fabric might need to be taken in a bit on the side seams, so be sure to try it on before hemming. No matter how many times you might make it, each time still needs particular attention during the final fitting.

Details make all the difference and can really vary the look of a pattern. Use shirt buttons or toggles, piping or braided trim to change a look. A contrasting fabric for collar and cuffs, using your fabric on the bias, are other ways to add variety. If you're a good seamstress, there's no reason why you can't get more variety from your original pattern by adding a sleeve, collar or pocket from another pattern. When you decide to make a change, be sure to superimpose the new piece, a sleeve, for example, over the original sleeve in the pattern.

There will probably be subtle changes in the shape of the armhole, but they can usually be compensated for by reshaping the contour of the new sleeve to the old one. Use a felt-tipped pen to draw the cto draw the contour cut around it. You don't have to worry about anything but the two edges to be seamned together. If the shapes are too far afield, don't try.

At wit's end

A stitch in time adds to boredom

The world is bent on saving me time.

My books are condensed, my food is pre-cooked, and even my oven cleans itself as I sleep.

The other morning, I saved three seconds with a one-step waxer, five seconds by using a stronger bleach, and 12 seconds by letting my fingers walk through the yellow pages.

By using an aspirin that raced to my blood stream, I picked up another four seconds, and by using the expressway, another six seconds.

I used a suntan location that tanned me in half the time, putting six second in my time bank, used a drive-in cleaner that saved me four seconds, and unclogged a sink with a liquid cleanser that saved me seven seconds.

My new coffee maker saved me four seconds over my old one, my gasoline saved me three seconds at the pump, and my record club saved me a full 13 seconds by picking my records out for me each month.

Around four in the afternoon, I found that I had saved a total of one minute and seven seconds. I decided to blow 'em.

I called the operator and asked her to place a call for me. She replied stiffly, "You can save time and money by dialing the number yourself."

"I know," I said, "but I've got the time and I'd like to spend some of it before it stacks up." She mumbled something and gave me a disconnect.

I dropped off at the grocer and took my place in line. "The express line will save you time, lady. You have under six items."

"That's okay" I said cheerfully, 'I've got time to waste."

"So, it's not fair to the people behind you," he said.

Just before dinner, the Avon lady dropped by and began quickly to show her wares. "Relax," I said. "I have a minute and seven seconds burning a hole in my pocket. How about a cup of tea?"

"You don't understand," she said hurriedly. "The purpose of my visit is to save you time."

That's the trouble with people. They spend all their lives amassing time and then there's no place to spend it.

Diet foods discussed

This column is a service from Cooperative Extension Nutritionists at Lincoln University and the University of Missouri. Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Nutrition Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, MO 65101.

Q. Are dietetic foods helpful in weight control diets?

A. That depends on the caloric value of the food, which should be given on the label. Dietic foods are made for a variety of special diet needs including low sodium, low cholesterol, low fat, food allergy, low carbohydrate and diabetes. Unless the dietetic food has a greatly reduced amount of calories compared to an ordinary food of the same type it obviously won't pay to spend the extra money for it to include in a reducing diet.

Many of the foods sold as "low calorie" foods are of questionable value for weight control diets. Indeed, the actual energy content of breakfast cereals and breads sold as "diet foods" usually is very similar to that for conventional cereal products. Thinly sliced bread has fewer calories per slice but the same energy content as ordinary bread on an equal weight basis.

Anyone trying to control weight should remember that the total amount of calories consumed is the important principle to keep in mind for weight gain or loss. Portion control, therefore, is a key factor for weight reduction. For example, ice milk (5 per cent fat) contains about 25 per cent fewer calories than ice cream (10 per cent fat), but two servings of ice milk will add a lot more calories to your total intake than one serving of ice cream.

Q. How does soft serve compare to ice cream in calorie value?

A. Many people erroneously assume that soft serve ice milk is low in energy value but the fact is that a cup serving has more calories (266) than an equal amount of regular ice cream (257 calories). It does contain less fat and more protein than 10 per cent fat ice cream, but the extra sugar added to make soft serve greatly adds to its energy value. Frozen custard (soft serve ice cream) has even more calories (334 per cup). Incidentally, sherbet is no "bargain" for weight watchers either, since it contains about 260 calories in a cup serving. Also, sherbet doesn't have the overall food value of ice cream or ice milk, which are good sources of protein, minerals and vitamins. In fact, the small amount of nutrients other than carbohydrate found in sherbet indicates that it may properly be called an "empty calorie" food.

Q. Are artifically sweetened beverages safe to drink?

A. The Food and Drug Administration recommends that no more than seven 12-ounce bottles of artifically sweetened beverages be consumed by an adult in one day. This is because of the saccharin used in place of sugar. One gram of saccharin is considered the maximum safe amount for one day, which is about the quantity contained in seven bottles of sugar free beverage.

Saccharin has been in use for a long time, about 80 years, so it would appear to be a fairly safe product. However, tests with rats found that very high levels in the diet caused bladder tumors. The amount of saccharin fed to the rats is worth noting in applying the experimental results to man. On the basis of body size, an adult man would need to drink more than 80 gallons of artifically sweetened beverages each day to receive the equivalent quantity of saccharin given to the rats.

Tests are continuing to learn more about the safety of saccharin. Food companies are very interested in the outcome of the tests since saccharin is the only artificial sweetener approved for general use in the food industry at the present time.

SPANISH PAINTING

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A major work by Spanish painter Bartolme Esteban Murillo has been acquired by the Toledo Museum of Art.

Otto Wittmann, museum director, described the 6-by-5 foot "Adoration of the Magi" as "the most important Spanish painting to be acquired by the Museum in almost two decades."

The painting is said to have been painted around 1650 in Seville. Murillo lived from 1618 to 1682, devoting most of his time to working for Seville's numerous churches and religious orders.

High blood pressure is a killer

Many of us think that high blood pressure is caused by stress. In most cases, however, doctors don't know what causes high blood pressure. What they do know is that high blood pressure is a killer.

It can bring on heart failure, kidney damage or stroke. And nearly half the people who have high blood pressure are women. A woman's chances of having high blood pressure become greater than a man's as she gets older, especially after menopause.

To help women learn what factors can affect high blood pressure and how it is treated, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has made available a new publication. For a single free copy of What Every Woman Should Know About High Blood Pressure, write the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 39, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Before you let your doctor prescribe birth control pills, have your blood pressure checked. And, if you're already taking "the pill," have your blood pressure checked every six months or so. Contraceptive drugs can cause high blood pressure in some women. This is more likely to happen if you have mild kidney disease, or a family history of high blood pressure.

Doctors always keep a close watch on a woman's blood pressure during pregnancy because some women who have never had high blood pressure may develop it rapidly toward the end of pregnancy. Pregnancy can make high blood pressure m ore severe in women who already have it. High blood pressur associated with pregnancy usually disappears after delivery.

Nobody knows why, but studies show that black women, even very young black women, are much more susceptible to high blood pressure than white women. Not only is the disease more common among black women, but it often tends to be m ore serious.

If there's a history of high blood pressure in your family, there's a good chance that you have it or may develop it. If you have it, it's quite possible that your children may develop it. Like adults, children should have regular blood pressure checks. Having your blood pressure checked is a quick and painless process.

If you are found to have high blood pressure, you may be advised to lose weight, and use less salt. If it is very high, medication may be prescribed.

What Every Woman Should Know About High Blood Pressure (free) is one of more then 250 selected Federal publications listed in the Fall edition of the catalgo, Consumer Information. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Service Administration, the catalog is available free from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

JUDY'S POT ROAST

It's made in a slow-cooker.

3-pound chuck beef for pot roast
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 teaspoons dried dillweed
¼ cup dry red wine
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
1 cup sour cream
3 tablespoons flour blended with 3 tablespoons water

Rub a mixture of the salt pepper and 1 teaspoon of the dillweed over the beef; place in an electric slow-cooker. Stir together the wine and vinegar and add. Cook, covered, on low until tender — about 9 hours. Remove beef. Pour hot meat juice in slow cooker — there will be a generous pintful — into a 10-inch skillet. Gradually stir sour cream into flour-water mixture, keeping smooth; stir into skillet with remaining dillweed; cook gently, stirring constantly, until thickened and boiling. Slice meat thin (this is easiest to do if it is chilled); add to sauce and reheat. Serve with noodles. Makes 6 servings.

Ann Landers

Ann's 'nasal twang' elicits comments

Dear Ann Landers: Saw you on the Tonight Show with Barbara Walters hosting in place of Johnny Carson. You really are a nifty dancer but then, Ray Bolger could make anybody look good.

I loved your white dress with the rows of fringe. Did you make it yourself?

I have also seen your sister, Dear Abby, on the Tonight Show, and she, too, is darling. But I wish you girls would keep your mouths shut.

What in the world is wrong with your voices? You both have the same speech impediment. You could both use a good speech therapist. Have you ever heard a playback of yourselves? That rasping, irritating nasal twang CAN be corrected. Please don't blame it on Iowa. I was raised in Des Moines and I don't sound as if I am talking through two sets of false teeth.

Someone should level with you, and your best friend Barbara Walters won't because she doesn't sound a hell of a lot better. Sign me -- Sore Ears From Houston Who Tells It Like It Is

Dear Ears: Thanks for your warm comments. Glad you liked my dress. No, I didn't make it myself. Bill Blass deserves the credit.

As for that rasping, irritating, nasal twang -- nobody's perfect. In the meantime, Barbara Walters will soon be making a million clams a year with her "impediment." Eat your heart out, Houston.

Dear Ann Landers: I was disturbed by the reply you gave the 11-year-old girl who asked if she could get pregnant before she started to menstruate. You said no.

I'm a registered nurse who works in labor-delivery. I've cared for four 11- and 12-year-olds who became pregnant before the onset of their periods. These girls happened to have intercourse at the time of their first ovulation and got caught. Please change your answer. It would be awful if that youngster started to fool around because of you.

A similar occurrence is the new mother who gets pregnant before her six-week check-up, assuming she is "safe" because she has not resumed her menstrual cycle.

Pre-teens and women who have two babies in one year make rotten patients. We don't want 'em. -- O.B. Nurse In Sgfld.

Dear Nurse: You are right. I was wrong. That answer was one of the worst I have ever given and I am ashamed of myself. Dozens of doctors and nurses wrote to set me straight and so did several teenagers. It's sackcloth and ashes for me these next 30 days.

Dear Ann: I've seen several letters to the editor and comments by other columnists who doubted your survey which reported 70 per cent of the parents who responded would NOT have had children if they had it to do over again.

Recently my husband and I watched a dear friend, a fine, decent, caring person, destroyed by her daughter. When we see what others are going through with their kids we are glad we were not "blessed" with a family -- and there are many more like us. -- Anonymus -- Of Course

Dear Anon: The cloak of anonymity brings out the truth like nothing else. Thanks for writing.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

The Battle of Bemis Heights on Oct. 7, 1777, was the last battle of the Saratoga Campaign. Benedict Arnold rallied Gen. Horatio Gates' continental troops and forced the surrender of "Gentleman Johnny" Burgoyne after Gates refused to move against the inferior British forces. Arnold directed the battle against Burgoyne's lieutenant, Simon Fraser. With Fraser's fall, the redcoats withdrew, leaving behind 600 casualties, The World Almanac notes.

How to get mileage from a pattern

Sometimes a pattern turns out to be just right for you — it has the perfect fit and look and you absolutely love it. How can you make it more versatile? By taking a basic shirt pattern, Glamour Magazine shows you how to sew several great-looking things from your perfect pattern. Here are a few ways to get more mileage from it:

Make it hip-length to wear over pants.

Cut it below the knee to use as a dress, or again as a tunic over pants.

Make it into a long caftan for at-home, and a sleep shirt as well.

Create a shirttail effect by leaving the side seams open and rounding the edges.

Cut it short to hit your waist and wear it over pants.

Layer it over itself using a heavier fabric outside and shirting-weight underneath. (You might cut the overshirt just a bit larger.) Make it flannel or gauze.

A piece as versatile as this is a perfect weekend wardrobe by itself. Just add different accessories and layers and it can take you from day into evening, from the beach in summer to dinner in the city.

It can look sophisticated when it hangs loosely over pants, casual under a vest, wrapping your waist with a soft tie belt.

TIPS

If you are adding length to the pattern or making a longer length than the pattern envelope calls for — simply lay out the pattern and make a tissue paper extension for the desired length. Measure this to find the extra yardage needed.

Don't make the mistake of using your favorite pattern in one season only. Many can work equally well all year round. Try crisp shirting stripes with a white cotton for summer, flannel plaids therough winter for shirt styles. Try sportswear fabrics for day and silks and velvets for evenings.

The first time you make your perfect pattern, remember to note all your adjustments on the tissue pattern itself. This will make it much easier to put together the next time.

Although you may have made up this pattern before, remember that all fabrics will react differently to the same pattern. A heavier or bulkier fabric might need to be taken in a bit on the side seams, so be sure to try it on before hemming. No matter how many times you might make it, each time still needs particular attention during the final fitting.

Details make all the difference and can really vary the look of a pattern. Use shirt buttons or toggles, piping or braided trim to change a look. A contrasting fabric for collar and cuffs, using your fabric on the bias, are other ways to add variety. If you're a good seamstress, there's no reason why you can't get more variety from your original pattern by adding a sleeve, collar or pocket from another pattern. When you decide to make a change, be sure to superimpose the new piece, a sleeve, for example, over the original sleeve in the pattern.

There will probably be subtle changes in the shape of the armhole, but they can usually be compensated for by reshaping the contour of the new sleeve to the old one. Use a felt-tipped pen to draw the cto draw the contour cut around it. You don't have to worry about anything but the two edges to be seamned together. If the shapes are too far afield, don't try.

CARAMEL CORN

Perfect for friends who are on a low-salt diet.

10 cups warm popped popcorn
1½ cups dry roasted salt-free peanuts
¾ cup granulated sugar
¾ cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
½ cup water
1-3rd cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon white vinegar
½ cup unsalted margarine

In a large mixing bowl stir together the popcorn and peanuts; keep warm. In a 2-quart saucepan stir together the remaining ingredients; cook over medium heat, stirring often, to 270 degrees on a candy thermometer. At once pour over warm popcorn mixture and toss to coat well. Spread out on a cookie sheet to cool and dry. Break into pieces. Makes 1½ pounds, 12 servings.

At wit's end

A stitch in time adds to boredom

The world is bent on saving me time.

My books are condensed, my food is pre-cooked, and even my oven cleans itself as I sleep.

The other morning, I saved three seconds with a one-step waxer, five seconds by using a stronger bleach, and 12 seconds by letting my fingers walk through the yellow pages.

By using an aspirin that raced to my blood stream, I picked up another four seconds, and by using the expressway, another six seconds.

I used a suntan location that tanned me in half the time, putting six second in my time bank, used a drive-in cleaner that saved me four seconds, and unclogged a sink with a liquid cleanser that saved me seven seconds.

My new coffee maker saved me four seconds over my old one, my gasoline saved me three seconds at the pump, and my record club saved me a full 13 seconds by picking my records out for me each month.

Around four in the afternoon, I found that I had saved a total of one minute and seven seconds. I decided to blow 'em.

I called the operator and asked her to place a call for me. She replied stiffly, "You can save time and money by dialing the number yourself."

"I know," I said, "but I've got the time and I'd like to spend some of it before it stacks up." She mumbled something and gave me a disconnect.

I dropped off at the grocer and took my place in line. "The express line will save you time, lady. You have under six items."

"That's okay" I said cheerfully, 'I've got time to waste."

"So, it's not fair to the people behind you," he said.

Just before dinner, the Avon lady dropped by and began quickly to show her wares. "Relax," I said. "I have a minute and seven seconds burning a hole in my pocket. How about a cup of tea?"

"You don't understand," she said hurriedly. "The purpose of my visit is to save you time."

That's the trouble with people. They spend all their lives amassing time and then there's no place to spend it.

Diet foods discussed

This column is a service from Cooperative Extension Nutritionists at Lincoln University and the University of Missouri. Questions from readers about food and diet are welcomed. Letters should be addressed to: Dr. James W. Nordstrom, Nutrition Extension, Lincoln University, Jefferson City, MO 65101.

Q. Are dietetic foods helpful in weight control diets?

A. That depends on the caloric value of the food, which should be given on the label. Dietic foods are made for a variety of special diet needs including low sodium, low cholesterol, low fat, food allergy, low carbohydrate and diabetes. Unless the dietetic food has a greatly reduced amount of calories compared to an ordinary food of the same type it obviously won't pay to spend the extra money for it to include in a reducing diet.

Many of the foods sold as "low calorie" foods are of questionable value for weight control diets. Indeed, the actual energy content of breakfast cereals and breads sold as "diet foods" usually is very similar to that for conventional cereal products. Thinly sliced bread has fewer calories per slice but the same energy content as ordinary bread on an equal weight basis.

Anyone trying to control weight should remember that the total amount of calories consumed is the important principle to keep in mind for weight gain or loss. Portion control, therefore, is a key factor for weight reduction. For example, ice milk (5 per cent fat) contains about 25 per cent fewer calories than ice cream (10 per cent fat), but two servings of ice milk will add a lot more calories to your total intake than one serving of ice cream.

Q. How does soft serve compare to ice cream in calorie value?

A. Many people erroneously assume that soft serve ice milk is low in energy value but the fact is that a cup serving has more calories (266) than an equal amount of regular ice cream (257 calories). It does contain less fat and more protein than 10 per cent fat ice cream, but the extra sugar added to make soft serve greatly adds to its energy value. Frozen custard (soft serve ice cream) has even more calories (334 per cup). Incidentally, sherbet is no "bargain" for weight watchers either, since it contains about 260 calories in a cup serving. Also, sherbet doesn't have the overall food value of ice cream or ice milk, which are good sources of protein, minerals and vitamins. In fact, the small amount of nutrients other than carbohydrate found in sherbet indicates that it may properly be called an "empty calorie" food.

Q. Are artifically sweetened beverages safe to drink?

A. The Food and Drug Administration recommends that no more than seven 12-ounce bottles of artifically sweetened beverages be consumed by an adult in one day. This is because of the saccharin used in place of sugar. One gram of saccharin is considered the maximum safe amount for one day, which is about the quantity contained in seven bottles of sugar free beverage.

Saccharin has been in use for a long time, about 80 years, so it would appear to be a fairly safe product. However, tests with rats found that very high levels in the diet caused bladder tumors. The amount of saccharin fed to the rats is worth noting in applying the experimental results to man. On the basis of body size, an adult man would need to drink more than 80 gallons of artifically sweetened beverages each day to receive the equivalent quantity of saccharin given to the rats.

Tests are continuing to learn more about the safety of saccharin. Food companies are very interested in the outcome of the tests since saccharin is the only artificial sweetener approved for general use in the food industry at the present time.

SPANISH PAINTING

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A major work by Spanish painter Bartolme Esteban Murillo has been acquired by the Toledo Museum of Art.

Otto Wittmann, museum director, described the 6-by-5 foot "Adoration of the Magi" as "the most important Spanish painting to be acquired by the Museum in almost two decades."

The painting is said to have been painted around 1650 in Seville. Murillo lived from 1618 to 1682, devoting most of his time to working for Seville's numerous churches and religious orders.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

The Battle of Bemis Heights on Oct. 7, 1777, was the last battle of the Saratoga Campaign. Benedict Arnold rallied Gen. Horatio Gates' continental troops and forced the surrender of "Gentleman Johnny" Burgoyne after Gates refused to move against the inferior British forces. Arnold directed the battle against Burgoyne's lieutenant, Simon Fraser. With Fraser's fall, the redcoats withdrew, leaving behind 600 casualties, The World Almanac notes.

2. Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere gratitude for all the kindnesses and courtesies extended to us at the passing of our loved one, Lela Lackey, and to thank those who assisted at the services, Rev. T. A. McConough and Rev. Ralph Dodson, those who sent the lovely flowers and thoughtful gifts of food. We appreciate the kindness of the staff of the McMikle Funeral Home in East Prairie. In memory of our loved one -- the family of Lela Lackey.

We sincerely wish to express our deepest thanks for the many kindnesses shown us following the death of our dear husband, father, grandfather, and great - grandfather to the many friends neighbors and relatives who sent food, flowers, and spiritual bouquets, and other acts of kindness. Also our heartfelt appreciation to Rev. Francis Donovan, organist, pallbearers and the Amic- Burnett Funeral Home. These acts of thoughtfulness will never be forgotten.

Many Stoddard committee positions unfilled

BLOOMFIELD— In Tuesday's Stoddard County primary election, there were few announced candidates for committeeman and committeewoman positions in either the Democratic or Republican Party, meaning the positions had to be filled by write-in vote, if they were filled at all.

The result was confusion.

In Liberty Township, for example, a total of 63 names were written in. In other townships, names of Democrats had been written in for Republican committee positions.

In some townships, Republican position went unfilled.

By Thursday, however, the office of County Clerk John Marvin Capps had managed to wade through the total number of votes cast and released the results of the election.

To make things even more complicated, not all of the announced candidates filed the proper campaign expenditure forms, making it uncertain whether they can take office.

Capps said it will be up to the Board of Election Commissioners tro decide.

In Castor Township, the only announced Democratic candidates were Fred Wethington and Lois E. Mooney, who polled 864 and 890 votes respectively.

Neither, however, had filed initial campaign expenditure reports by the deadline as required by law.

Write-in candidates receiving votes in Castor Township were: Joan Van Clive, 5; Mrs. Joe Welborn, 2; Helen Lee, 1; Joyce Merick, 1; Jarvis Walker, 1; R. E. Sharp, 1; Lawrence Geary, 2; James Pepper, 1; John Branum, 1; Bill Lee, 2; and Bill Pruitt, 1.

In Duck Creek Township, William Eddie Sifford, mayor of Puxico, was unopposed for the position of committeeman, and polled 482 votes. There was no announced candidate for committeewoman, but Marilyn Williams was elected to the position with seven write-in votes.

Other Democrats receiving write-in votes in the township were: Neal Mansfield, 1; Ruth Doublin, 1; Mary Taylor, 2; Mary Culbertson, 3; Katy Hardy, 2; L. Fann, 1; Zelma Skillings, 1; L. Roach, 1; Judy Fredericison, 1; Sharon Smith, 1; Margaret Ann Sifford, 6; L. Wilkerson, 1; C. Koppman, 1; and Mary Lou Huey, 6.

The only announced candidates in Elk Township were Democrats Jim Goforth, who polled 126 votes, and Mary Jo Goforth, who received 121 votes on the Democratic ticket. One write-in vote was cast for Mrs. George Watson.

The only candidates for this New Lisbon Townsship positions were write-ins. Elected were Charles Placher with three votes and Thelia Keena with four votes.

Other persons receiving write-in votes were: V. M. Watkins, 1; Loran Wilson,m 2; Willis Christian, 1; Gene Crenshaw, 1; Fred Skelton, 1; Bob Alexander, 1; Louis McGhee, 1; Jerry Bess, 1; Shell Lewis, 1; Jerry Crites, 2, Ronnie Edwards, 1; Felix Martin, 1; Margie Waggoner, 3; Vergie Alexander, 1; Mrs. Charles Placher, 3; and Wilma Edwards, 1.

A contest between Jack Crowell and L. B. Black for the committeeman position ended with Black being elected. He received 278 votes and Crowell polled 153. Howeer, neither candidate filed the proper campaign expense forms.

Liberty Township did not have a single announced candidate, but 63 Democratic write-in candidates. Winners were Timothy Duffie with 81 votes and Patricia Mize with 48 votes.

Other write-in candidates for the committeeman positions were: Sidney Johnson, 14; C. H. Parsons, 19; Robert Brannock, 17; Willis Conner and Harry Barker, 5 each; J. T. Howard, 3; George Lovins, 2; and Norman Swafford, Ray Coats, John Ringer, Bill Stone, Charles Jennings, Earl Young, Harold Barbour, Jerry Young, Glenn Ayers, Melvin Gainer, Dennis Keith, Darrell Cole, Richard Mayer, Perry Jones and Clyde Dixon, 1 each.

Additional write-in candidates for the committeewoman position included: Wilma Ringer, 10; Edna Brannock, 16; Ruth Winchester, JoNelle Musgraves, Marsha Vowels, Ruth Webb and Judy Smith, 2 votes each; and Mary Poyner, Geneva Pyle, Mary Thrower, Dorothy Parrish, Marie Conner, Nadine Boone, Ruth Baker, Martha Minton, Betty DelCour, Nancy Darcy, Alma Taylor, Inez Holder, Barbara Williams, Bonda Young, Dorothy Morgan Hendricks, Mary Penick, Shirla Howard, Florence Barker, Patty Hux and Pat O'Donnell, 1 each.

Compared to the Democratic ticket, Republicans had a relatively light turnout in Stoddard County, but a few write-in votes were cast for the Republican committee positions.

In Elk Township, no candidates announced for the positions, and none was elected.

In Liberty Township, the only two announced candidates for the Republican positions were elected. Elmer Kinkade received 202 votes and Virginia E. Hendricks collected 184 votes.

No write-in ballots were cast.

Castor Township also had only two announced candidates for committee positions, and both were elected. Bob Beal received 93 votes and Vera Wellman tallied 85 votes.

No write-in votes were cast here either.

All four Republican candidates filed the proper forms in the office of County Clerk John Marvin Capps prior to the official deadline.

In Richland Township, no committeeman was elected, but Sue Glenn was elected committeewoman with one write-in vote.

In New Lisbon Township, only one write-in vote was cast on the Republican ballot, and that was for Thelia Keena, a Democrat, meaning the position will probably go unfilled.

In Pike Township, Ed Cockrell, also a Democrat, received one write-in vote as a Republican committeeman. He was beat, however, by William Knoderer, who drew three write-in votes. One write-in vote each was also cast for Ed Cantrell and Leeman Schrader.

There was a tie for the committeewoman position between Christina Carlton and Jean Spencer, who received one vote each. The Republican Central Committee will choose the winner.

Another tie occurred in Duck Creek Twonship, but one of the vote-getters was a Democratic committeeman, William Eddie Sifford, who received one write-in vote. Wiley Mattingly, a Republican, received the other write in vote.

An official in Capps' office said the reason votes were cast for Democrats on a Republican ballot apparently resulted from confusion on the part of voters.

Two persons received minor injuries at 1:25 p.m. Thursday two miles north of Benton on Interstate 55 when a southbound car driven by Melvin Heron, 26, of Memphis, Tenn., ran off the road and overturned.

The driver and a passenger, Herbert Bernard, 30, of Memphis, were treated by an emergency medical technician who was called to the scene.

A Lutesville resident received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 6 p.m. Thursday on an unmarked gravel road about five miles southwest of Lutesville.

The accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Robert Dale Daughterty, 28, of Lutesville Route Three collided on a curve in the narrow road with a northbound car driven by Angela Rene Fortenberry, 16, of Lutesville.

Kevin Jerry Fortenberry, a passenger in the Fortenberry vehicle, received injuries and was taken to St. Francis Hospital at Cape Girardeau.

"If the road had started giving way -- it was so deep and with the children with us — to get out would have been close to impossible," she said.

Mrs. Steward added that they were in such a good location that the small two-man helicopters which were used to rescue people in the canyon, brought survivors to their location. By the time the Stewards were airlifted out, 70 people had been brought to their section of road.

They were airlifted Sunday to a camp at the base of the canyon. The children were then airlifted to Loveland. Later in the day, Mr. and Mrs. Steward went out in a four-wheel drive vehicle.

While still in the canyon, the Stewards kept the heater running in the motor home so newcomers could get warm. They gave out clothing and made coffee.

Others struggled to get blankets and flashlights to less fortunate survivors.

Mrs. Steward said the group made a tent from large pieces of plastic by spreading them over some large rocks, then spent much of Sunday huddled there.

Perhaps the most surprising sights that awaited the Stewards Sunday were the people who had climbed verticle cliffs 100 to 200 feet high to escape the water.

"There's no way they could have gotten up there," Steward said. "We asked them how they climbed up there because they couldn't get down."

He said they replied they did not know how they got there.

"It's amazing what adrenalin will do," Steward said.

One of the people trapped on the same section of highway with the Stewards was a man from London, England. He was a mountain climber who has climbed three of the four faces of the Matterhorn in the Swiss Alps. But he told the Stewards he never been more frightened than he was that night.

Steward said it was estimated that 250 to 500 cars were on the highway when the flood hit. A helicopter pilot told them Sunday he counted only 75 left.

The Stewards did not see any cars floating down the river, but talked with people who had.

They had nothing but praise for the rescue workers and the people in Loveland, a town of about 20,000.

The rescue helicopters were overhead the next morning, beginning to pull people out of the canyon, they said. There were helicopters owned by private individuals, the Red Cross, the National Guard and a hospital.

"The people of Loveland were a fine group of people, and did as much as they could possibly do," Steward said.

At the school in Loveland where the survivors were taken, hot meals, clothes, toothpaste, toys and books were provided for the children.

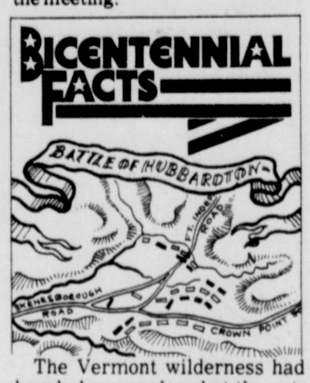
"While we were there (30 minutes to an hour), we had four or five couples come up to us and offer us their homes to stay in," Steward said. One man offered them his automobile.

Local people brought their campers to the school for people to stay in.

"We just didn't believe all these people offering to take total strangers home with them and feed them," Mrs. Steward said.

Steward said he was told it would be two to six months before his motor home could be recovered. The motorcycles are gone for good.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS



The Vermont wilderness had barely been explored at the outbreak of the Revolution, and the area was not a colony. Throughout the Revolutionary years it was known as the New Hampshire Grants and was the subject of controversy between New York and New Hampshire. The state did not gain independent status until 1791. The Battle of Hubbardton, during Burgoyne's 1777 campaign, was the only major military action in Vermont. The World Almanac notes.

To church leaders

Capitol Hill sex scandal seen as lapse in fidelity

NEW YORK (AP) — Church leaders see the Capitol Hill sex scandal not just in terms of prviate behavior but as reflecting a general lapse in principles of fidelity affecting modern society.

The two spheres — public and personal conduct — are interconnected and follow parallel tendencies, several theologians and religious officials said when questioned about the matter.

"Public and private morality — two aspects of the same thing — have collapsed in on each other," said the Rev. Eugene Kennedy, a noted Roman Catholic priest-psychologist of Chicago's Loyola University.

"Both America and Wayne Hays are in trouble because two virtues thought to be old-fashioned — fidelity and commitment — are abiding truths instead. ... We write our moral signatures in the way we live with each other."

The quality of those relationships, whether between man and woman, between a person and his associates or between elected officials and their constituents, all depend identically on the condition of character, the church thinkers said.

They don't buy the common assertion that only voting records of public officials count, and not personal dealings with others.

"Disclosures of this sort of activity undercut a just political order from Watergate to breadkdowns in social stability," said the Rev. Dr. Robert Marshall, president of the Lutheran Church in America.

"It shows the need for persons with convictions to assert those principles and calls for leadership both skilled in the political process and also in setting ideals for the citizenry in personal life."

The Rev. Dr. Foy Valentine of Nashville, Tenn., head of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, said he didn't want to "cast as much as a pebble, much less a stone, at any sinner" — which includes everyone — but he added:

"We must not wink at the utterly rephrensible immorality being manifest by the current revelation of sex scandals and skulduggery in high places."

He quoted St. Augustine as saying the Roman Empire "perished for want of order in the soul," and added: "This manifestation of want of order in the soul of individuals and of the nation is a sinister and terrible thing."

Sister Elizabeth Thoman of Los Angeles, director of the National Sisters Communications Service, said the "situation is another reminder that there is something wrong in a political system that allows some people — too often white sexist middle-class males — to have unchecked power without accountability."

Spencer W. Kimball, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), said the disclosures reflect "an attitude of indifference toward serious acts of wrongdoing."

Preus says Synod dissension confined to 'small minority'

BOSTON (AP) — The head of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod says dissension over theology within his denomination is confined to a "small minority" and the controversy is drawing to a close.

The Rev. Jacob E. O. Preus, president of the Missouri Synod, gave that assessment Tuesday to delegates of a separate Lutheran group, the Lutheran Church in America. Preus, an advocate of literal interpretation of Biblical language, acknowledged that some liberals have refused to accept Synod positions on various doctrinal matters.

Calling the controversy an "identity problem," Preus estimated that about 100 of the Synod's 6,200 congregations have broken ties with the parent body. He said about 1,800 of the Synod's 7,000 pastors were among the dissenters, and he conceded that many had become affiliated with other Lutheran groups.

Preus said Synod officials have tried to act cautiously in the dispute.

"We are taking a patient attitude, trying to avoid lawsuits or any precipitous action," he said. "People who are leaving seem to need a cause and we don't want to give them one. ... Sometimes they provoke the situation."

The Missouri Synod claims about 2.8 million adherents. The Lutheran Church in America, holding its eighth biennial convention here, has a membership of 3.1 million.

THE BIBLE

No. 251. The Potter's Shop

The Lord commanded Jeremiah to go to a certain potter's shop and to observe the craftsman at his work. Jeremiah did as he was told, and he found the potter busily working at his wheel. However, the vessel the potter was forming was flawed.

The potter, displeased with his work, destroyed it. Then he kneaded the clay into another lump and started over again, working until he produced a work which was satisfactory to him.

Then the Lord said, "O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the Lord. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel. At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it; If that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them." The Vermont wilderness had barely been explored at the outbreak of the Revolution, and the area was not a colony. Throughout the Revolutionary years it was known as the New Hampshire Grants and was the subject of controversy between New York and New Hampshire. The state did not gain independent status until 1791. The Battle of Hubbardton, during Burgoyne's 1777 campaign, was the only major military action in Vermont, The World Almanac notes.

Many Stoddard committee positions unfilled

BLOOMFIELD— In Tuesday's Stoddard County primary election, there were few announced candidates for committeeman and committeewoman positions in either the Democratic or Republican Party, meaning the positions had to be filled by write-in vote, if they were filled at all.

The result was confusion.

In Liberty Township, for example, a total of 63 names were written in. In other townships, names of Democrats had been written in for Republican committee positions.

In some townships, Republican position went unfilled.

By Thursday, however, the office of County Clerk John Marvin Capps had managed to wade through the total number of votes cast and released the results of the election.

To make things even more complicated, not all of the announced candidates filed the proper campaign expenditure forms, making it uncertain whether they can take office.

Capps said it will be up to the Board of Election Commissioners tro decide.

In Castor Township, the only announced Democratic candidates were Fred Wethington and Lois E. Mooney, who polled 864 and 890 votes respectively.

Neither, however, had filed initial campaign expenditure reports by the deadline as required by law.

Write-in candidates receiving votes in Castor Township were: Joan Van Clive, 5; Mrs. Joe Welborn, 2; Helen Lee, 1; Joyce Merick, 1; Jarvis Walker, 1; R. E. Sharp, 1; Lawrence Geary, 2; James Pepper, 1; John Branum, 1; Bill Lee, 2; and Bill Pruitt, 1.

In Duck Creek Township, William Eddie Sifford, mayor of Puxico, was unopposed for the position of committeeman, and polled 482 votes. There was no announced candidate for committeewoman, but Marilyn Williams was elected to the position with seven write-in votes.

Other Democrats receiving write-in votes in the township were: Neal Mansfield, 1; Ruth Doublin, 1; Mary Taylor, 2; Mary Culbertson, 3; Katy Hardy, 2; L. Fann, 1; Zelma Skillings, 1; L. Roach, 1; Judy Fredericison, 1; Sharon Smith, 1; Margaret Ann Sifford, 6; L. Wilkerson, 1; C. Koppman, 1; and Mary Lou Huey, 6.

The only announced candidates in Elk Township were Democrats Jim Goforth, who polled 126 votes, and Mary Jo Goforth, who received 121 votes on the Democratic ticket. One write-in vote was cast for Mrs. George Watson.

The only candidates for this New Lisbon Townsship positions were write-ins. Elected were Charles Placher with three votes and Thelia Keena with four votes.

Other persons receiving write-in votes were: V. M. Watkins, 1; Loran Wilson,m 2; Willis Christian, 1; Gene Crenshaw, 1; Fred Skelton, 1; Bob Alexander, 1; Louis McGhee, 1; Jerry Bess, 1; Shell Lewis, 1; Jerry Crites, 2, Ronnie Edwards, 1; Felix Martin, 1; Margie Waggoner, 3; Vergie Alexander, 1; Mrs. Charles Placher, 3; and Wilma Edwards, 1.

A contest between Jack Crowell and L. B. Black for the committeeman position ended with Black being elected. He received 278 votes and Crowell polled 153. Howeer, neither candidate filed the proper campaign expense forms.

Liberty Township did not have a single announced candidate, but 63 Democratic write-in candidates. Winners were Timothy Duffie with 81 votes and Patricia Mize with 48 votes.

Other write-in candidates for the committeeman positions were: Sidney Johnson, 14; C. H. Parsons, 19; Robert Brannock, 17; Willis Conner and Harry Barker, 5 each; J. T. Howard, 3; George Lovins, 2; and Norman Swafford, Ray Coats, John Ringer, Bill Stone, Charles Jennings, Earl Young, Harold Barbour, Jerry Young, Glenn Ayers, Melvin Gainer, Dennis Keith, Darrell Cole, Richard Mayer, Perry Jones and Clyde Dixon, 1 each.

Additional write-in candidates for the committeewoman position included: Wilma Ringer, 10; Edna Brannock, 16; Ruth Winchester, JoNelle Musgraves, Marsha Vowels, Ruth Webb and Judy Smith, 2 votes each; and Mary Poyner, Geneva Pyle, Mary Thrower, Dorothy Parrish, Marie Conner, Nadine Boone, Ruth Baker, Martha Minton, Betty DelCour, Nancy Darcy, Alma Taylor, Inez Holder, Barbara Williams, Bonda Young, Dorothy Morgan Hendricks, Mary Penick, Shirla Howard, Florence Barker, Patty Hux and Pat O'Donnell, 1 each.

Compared to the Democratic ticket, Republicans had a relatively light turnout in Stoddard County, but a few write-in votes were cast for the Republican committee positions.

In Elk Township, no candidates announced for the positions, and none was elected.

In Liberty Township, the only two announced candidates for the Republican positions were elected. Elmer Kinkade received 202 votes and Virginia E. Hendricks collected 184 votes.

No write-in ballots were cast.

Castor Township also had only two announced candidates for committee positions, and both were elected. Bob Beal received 93 votes and Vera Wellman tallied 85 votes.

No write-in votes were cast here either.

All four Republican candidates filed the proper forms in the office of County Clerk John Marvin Capps prior to the official deadline.

In Richland Township, no committeeman was elected, but Sue Glenn was elected committeewoman with one write-in vote.

In New Lisbon Township, only one write-in vote was cast on the Republican ballot, and that was for Thelia Keena, a Democrat, meaning the position will probably go unfilled.

In Pike Township, Ed Cockrell, also a Democrat, received one write-in vote as a Republican committeeman. He was beat, however, by William Knoderer, who drew three write-in votes. One write-in vote each was also cast for Ed Cantrell and Leeman Schrader.

There was a tie for the committeewoman position between Christina Carlton and Jean Spencer, who received one vote each. The Republican Central Committee will choose the winner.

Another tie occurred in Duck Creek Twonship, but one of the vote-getters was a Democratic committeeman, William Eddie Sifford, who received one write-in vote. Wiley Mattingly, a Republican, received the other write in vote.

An official in Capps' office said the reason votes were cast for Democrats on a Republican ballot apparently resulted from confusion on the part of voters.

Two persons received minor injuries at 1:25 p.m. Thursday two miles north of Benton on Interstate 55 when a southbound car driven by Melvin Heron, 26, of Memphis, Tenn., ran off the road and overturned.

The driver and a passenger, Herbert Bernard, 30, of Memphis, were treated by an emergency medical technician who was called to the scene.

A Lutesville resident received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 6 p.m. Thursday on an unmarked gravel road about five miles southwest of Lutesville.

The accident occurred when a southbound car driven by Robert Dale Daughterty, 28, of Lutesville Route Three collided on a curve in the narrow road with a northbound car driven by Angela Rene Fortenberry, 16, of Lutesville.

Kevin Jerry Fortenberry, a passenger in the Fortenberry vehicle, received injuries and was taken to St. Francis Hospital at Cape Girardeau.

"If the road had started giving way -- it was so deep and with the children with us — to get out would have been close to impossible," she said.

Mrs. Steward added that they were in such a good location that the small two-man helicopters which were used to rescue people in the canyon, brought survivors to their location. By the time the Stewards were airlifted out, 70 people had been brought to their section of road.

They were airlifted Sunday to a camp at the base of the canyon. The children were then airlifted to Loveland. Later in the day, Mr. and Mrs. Steward went out in a four-wheel drive vehicle.

While still in the canyon, the Stewards kept the heater running in the motor home so newcomers could get warm. They gave out clothing and made coffee.

Others struggled to get blankets and flashlights to less fortunate survivors.

Mrs. Steward said the group made a tent from large pieces of plastic by spreading them over some large rocks, then spent much of Sunday huddled there.

Perhaps the most surprising sights that awaited the Stewards Sunday were the people who had climbed verticle cliffs 100 to 200 feet high to escape the water.

"There's no way they could have gotten up there," Steward said. "We asked them how they climbed up there because they couldn't get down."

He said they replied they did not know how they got there.

"It's amazing what adrenalin will do," Steward said.

One of the people trapped on the same section of highway with the Stewards was a man from London, England. He was a mountain climber who has climbed three of the four faces of the Matterhorn in the Swiss Alps. But he told the Stewards he never been more frightened than he was that night.

Steward said it was estimated that 250 to 500 cars were on the highway when the flood hit. A helicopter pilot told them Sunday he counted only 75 left.

The Stewards did not see any cars floating down the river, but talked with people who had.

They had nothing but praise for the rescue workers and the people in Loveland, a town of about 20,000.

The rescue helicopters were overhead the next morning, beginning to pull people out of the canyon, they said. There were helicopters owned by private individuals, the Red Cross, the National Guard and a hospital.

"The people of Loveland were a fine group of people, and did as much as they could possibly do," Steward said.

At the school in Loveland where the survivors were taken, hot meals, clothes, toothpaste, toys and books were provided for the children.

"While we were there (30 minutes to an hour), we had four or five couples come up to us and offer us their homes to stay in," Steward said. One man offered them his automobile.

Local people brought their campers to the school for people to stay in.

"We just didn't believe all these people offering to take total strangers home with them and feed them," Mrs. Steward said.

Steward said he was told it would be two to six months before his motor home could be recovered. The motorcycles are gone for good.

Game shortened by rain

Card's whipped 5-2 by Twitchell relief job

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Philadelphia's Wayne Twitchell wasn't really playing a game with the St. Louis Cardinals Thursday night. It just seemed that way.

The 6-foot-6 Twitchell, whose pitching this year has been limited to 31 2-3 innings, mowed down the Cards for four innings in a 5-2 Phils victory and afterward explained how.

"I stay sharp by throwing a lot in the bullpen and facing imaginary batters," said Twitchell, 2-0, the winner during a game shortened to eight innings by rain.

"All the pitchers in the bullpen and Tim McCarver have helped me," he added. "I'll start an inning and throw to three batters — say maybe Lou Brock, Bake McBride and Ted Simmons — and count balls and strikes.

"You don't even have to have anyone standing next to the plate," Twitchell said. "Pitching's concentration anyway. When you get in a game, you're not supposed to look at the batter."

Twitchell, who was making his 12th appearance, entered in the fifth inning after Ollie Brown's fifth home run and Garry Maddox' two-run single had rallied Philadelphia to a 4-2 lead.

Brock and Joe Ferguson struck out before Twitchell yielded a two-out single to Hector Cruz in the sixth and made Jerry Mumphrey his third strikeout victim an inning later.

Willie Crawford and Simmons opened the Cards' eighth with singles, but Twitchell repelled the challenge by fanning Ferguson, Mike Anderson and Cruz for the game's final outs.

"I threw a lot of sliders tonight, just due to the fact the ball was slippery," noted Twitchell, who lowered his earned run average to 1.42 and extended his string of walkless innings to 19.

"He could take anybody's place in the starting rotation right now," Phils Manager Danny Ozark said. "It's just difficult to use all 25 players."

Before Philadelphia broke through, Cruz' ninth home run of the year had provided St. Louis a 2-0 lead in the second inning against Phils starter Tom Underwood.

A steady rain then began in the fourth with the Phils' Mike Schmidt at bat, but the real cloudburst for Cards starter Lynn McGlothen, 9-11, was triggered by the Brown blast.

Charlie Jones - Card's PA man for 30 years

.. AP Sports Writer

—"Rogers Hornsby was my idol," the white-haired man, a near-septugenarian, declared. "Whenever I see a guy complain about a third strike, I always remember what he said. 'If they're good enough to call, they're good enough to hit.'"

The decades have passed since Hornsby, once the terror of the National League, wore the uniform of the St. Louis Cardinals. But in his absence, much of his spirit remains within Charlie Jones.

A retired telephone company switchman who speaks with tones which are still mellifluous, Jones is proud of the fact that in 30 years he's missed but three Cards home games while serving as public address announcer.

"Two of them were when my stepfather died and the other was late in the season for a makeup date," he said.

"I had a double hernia once during the season and in two weeks I was walking. The only other time I almost missed was when I went through a plate glass window at the laundromat I own. I severed an artery. But the team was out of town.

"It's a long story how I became an announcer," allowed Jones, a spry man born nearly 70 years ago who grew up within walking distance of Sportsman's Park, the Cards' former home.

"I was an usher captain," he recalled. "I used to see this guy sitting there and I thought that was a better job than I had, so I asked about it. Then one day the guy got his hours changed and they offered it to me. They asked me if I could be at all the games and I said I could.

"I really had no experience except that in my job with the telephone company in talking to a lot of people," acknowledged Jones, who since taking over behind the microphone has announced lineups for nearly 2,500 games.

"The most difficult part is when substitutes come pretty fast and you have to wait for the umpire to make them official. The worst thing that ever happened, really, was when the Philadelphia club was in town and the next day Cincinnati came in. There was a catching change and I said, 'Now catching for Philadelphia . . .'

"Another time was Pittsburgh's catcher, Manny Sanguillen. I said 'Sanny Manguillen,' but the only guy who caught it was the Pirates' p.r. man. My feeling is that if you blow one, just don't say anything about it."

Highlights of the Jones career have, of course, included a World Series the Cards played in during his first year, 1946, and two subsequent fall classic appearances in 1967 and '68.

But like many others he misses the more intimate atmosphere of older ball parks and decries a higher perch to which he's been assigned at press level.

"When you were down on the field you were more or less in the game and you could hear both dugouts," he reminisced. "I have to think one of the reasons we are no longer there is because there were people with big ears who couldn't keep their mouths shut."

Lambert fires one-hitter for Aces

A two-out double in the first inning was the only hit Aces' hurler Tim Lambert allowed in pitching the Sikeston team to a 10-0 victory over Scott City in the Scott City Little League Invitational Tournament. Meanwhile, Lambert and his team were racking the losers for nine hits in the game shortened by the ten-run rule.

Mike Hurley had a perfect three-for-three night at the plate, with two singles and a double. He scored twice. Lambert was two-for-three.

The Aces scored seven times in the third, on four hits, to put the game out of reach.

The Aces will return to Scott City for a 5:30 p.m. game tonight against Cape. A victory would earn them a second game at 8:30.

NBA dispersal draft finished

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the National Basketball Association has held its dispersal draft, a number of NBA teams might think it only fair that the Portland Trail Blazers hold one of their own.

If they did, the Trail Blazers probably would collect almost as much for their two front lines alone as the NBA took in for the 12 American Basketball Association players selected Thursday.

For example, how much do you think other NBA teams would fork over if they could take home Bill Walton or Sidney Wicks or Moses Malone or Maurice Lucas? Lloyd Neal would not come cheap either, and no doubt someone would pay a few sheckels for former No. 1 draft pick Larue Martin and current No. 1 draft pick Wally Walker.

All but Walker, who has yet to sign, belong to the Trail Blazers now after they selected Lucas and Malone in the telephone draft conducted at the NBA league office here.

They had to trade All Star guard Geoff Petrie, the last original player from Portland's 1970 expansion club, to Atlanta with reserve Steve Hawes to get Atlanta's No. 2 selection spot in the draft.

But it appears there are NBA general managers willing to send Portland adequate replacements in the following days and weeks if the Trail Blazers will part with some of their big men.

Veteran 6-9 forward Sidney Wicks once again found himself a big name in the trade rumor mill and there also was speculation that Malone would not be with the Blazers for long.

Portland probably will get its money's worth after shelling out $350,000 for the 6-10 Malone and $300,000 for the 6-9 Lucas, two of the ABA's bright young stars last season with St. Louis and Kentucky, respectively.

With the prices for the players pre-determined, only the Chicago Bulls dropped more into the kitty. They paid $1.1 million for 7-2 center Artis Gilmore of Kentucky, the top prize in the draft, which was still another step toward completing the merger agreement between the NBA and ABA.

Chicago had the first selection by virtue of its won-lost record last year, the worst of any of the 18 NBA teams or the four ABA teams that will be part of the merger this season.

The other high-priced selections were guard Ron Boone of St. Louis, picked No. 3 by Kansas City for $250,000; forward Marvin Barnes of St. Louis, selected No. 4 by Detroit for $500,000, and guard Bird Averitt of Kentucky, picked No. 8 by Buffalo for $125,000. Buffalo swapped picks with Milwaukee and threw in a second-round draft pick next spring to get a shot at Averitt.

In all, 12 of the 20 available players from the St. Louis and Kentucky franchises were selected — all but one on the first of the three rounds of the draft — and the teams paid a total of $2,832,750 for them. The money will be used to cover obligations to ABA players, the Kentucky and St. Louis franchises and those NBA teams which gave up original draft rights to the players involved.

The eight players not selected become free agents.

So. Fritz dropped

JEFFERSON CITY—Missouri's Natural Area System is almost unique in the country, but a bunch of birds could care less.

The System protects unique ecological communities, those in danger of extinction if they are overused. The areas range from native prairie to swamps, from huge trees to ... well, not to heron rookeries.

One area was South Fritz Island in Pike County. The 20-acre area was approved by the Conservation Commission in 1973. At that time, the Mississippi River island was a major rookery for American egrets and great blue herons.

But the birds abandoned the rookery for reasons best known to themselves, and as a result, the Conservation Commission has dropped South Fritz from its Natural Areas System.

Boating Tips...

CLEARING THE AIR ABOUT FOG

Chill air in early morning and late evening hours increases the possibility of developing fog conditions. And fog can be a formidable adversary to an inexperienced boater, warn the MerCruiser stern drive boating authorities. Always carry a compass. Upon approaching fog conditions, take a bearing toward shore and hold it until you get there and can follow the beach to port. Listen for and heed warning bells and whistles. If you really get lost in a fog, anchor and wait it out. As in any manner of boat operation, let common sense prevail even though your regular senses are obscured.

Midwest Plains tourney opens this evening

CHAFFEE — The Midwest Plains Regional 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth League Tournament gets underway tonight at Chaffee's Harmon Field with all four teams seeing action.

Ark City, Kansas will take on Missouri champion Jefferson City in the opening game at 6:00. Jefferson City won the Missouri crown last weekend at Dexter in the state tournament.

Chaffee-Illmo-Scott City, the host team, will meet Eddyville, Iowa at 8:00 in the second contest.

A team from Kansas was originally scheduled to compete in the tournament, but dropped out recently. The bracket was revised for four teams. The double-elimination tournament is scheduled to conclude Sunday afternoon.

Tournament festivities got underway last night as Missouri Treasurer James Spainhower spoke at a banquet at the Chaffee Elks Lodge.

To church leaders

NEW YORK (AP) — Church leaders see the Capitol Hill sex scandal not just in terms of prviate behavior but as reflecting a general lapse in principles of fidelity affecting modern society.

The two spheres — public and personal conduct — are interconnected and follow parallel tendencies, several theologians and religious officials said when questioned about the matter.

"Public and private morality — two aspects of the same thing — have collapsed in on each other," said the Rev. Eugene Kennedy, a noted Roman Catholic priest-psychologist of Chicago's Loyola University.

"Both America and Wayne Hays are in trouble because two virtues thought to be old-fashioned — fidelity and commitment — are abiding truths instead. ... We write our moral signatures in the way we live with each other."

The quality of those relationships, whether between man and woman, between a person and his associates or between elected officials and their constituents, all depend identically on the condition of character, the church thinkers said.

They don't buy the common assertion that only voting records of public officials count, and not personal dealings with others.

"Disclosures of this sort of activity undercut a just political order from Watergate to breadkdowns in social stability," said the Rev. Dr. Robert Marshall, president of the Lutheran Church in America.

"It shows the need for persons with convictions to assert those principles and calls for leadership both skilled in the political process and also in setting ideals for the citizenry in personal life."

The Rev. Dr. Foy Valentine of Nashville, Tenn., head of the Southern Baptist Christian Life Commission, said he didn't want to "cast as much as a pebble, much less a stone, at any sinner" — which includes everyone — but he added:

"We must not wink at the utterly rephrensible immorality being manifest by the current revelation of sex scandals and skulduggery in high places."

He quoted St. Augustine as saying the Roman Empire "perished for want of order in the soul," and added: "This manifestation of want of order in the soul of individuals and of the nation is a sinister and terrible thing."

Sister Elizabeth Thoman of Los Angeles, director of the National Sisters Communications Service, said the "situation is another reminder that there is something wrong in a political system that allows some people — too often white sexist middle-class males — to have unchecked power without accountability."

Spencer W. Kimball, president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), said the disclosures reflect "an attitude of indifference toward serious acts of wrongdoing."

BOSTON (AP) — The head of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod says dissension over theology within his denomination is confined to a "small minority" and the controversy is drawing to a close.

The Rev. Jacob E. O. Preus, president of the Missouri Synod, gave that assessment Tuesday to delegates of a separate Lutheran group, the Lutheran Church in America. Preus, an advocate of literal interpretation of Biblical language, acknowledged that some liberals have refused to accept Synod positions on various doctrinal matters.

Calling the controversy an "identity problem," Preus estimated that about 100 of the Synod's 6,200 congregations have broken ties with the parent body. He said about 1,800 of the Synod's 7,000 pastors were among the dissenters, and he conceded that many had become affiliated with other Lutheran groups.

Preus said Synod officials have tried to act cautiously in the dispute.

"We are taking a patient attitude, trying to avoid lawsuits or any precipitous action," he said. "People who are leaving seem to need a cause and we don't want to give them one. ... Sometimes they provoke the situation."

The Missouri Synod claims about 2.8 million adherents. The Lutheran Church in America, holding its eighth biennial convention here, has a membership of 3.1 million.

Religious educator to serve 3 parishes

CHAFFEE— The three Catholic parishes of Gurdian Angels in Oran, St. Ambrose in Chaffee and St. Lawrence in New Hamburg have hired Donald Emge as religious education coordinator. As coordinator, he will work in the various educational programs of the three parishes.

His primary concern will be for the religious education of Catholic young people who attend public schools. He will also be in charge of developing programs of adult education in the future.

He grew up in St. Paul, Mo., and taught in a Catholic high school in St. Louis. He received his master's degree in religious education from St. Louis University. For the past three years he has been coordinating religious education programs in the Minneapolis area.

Mrs. Emge, who is originally from St. Louis, is a registered nurse.

They are living at 124 Wright in Chaffee.

THE BIBLE
No. 251. The Potter's Shop

The Lord commanded Jeremiah to go to a certain potter's shop and to observe the craftsman at his work. Jeremiah did as he was told, and he found the potter busily working at his wheel. However, the vessel the potter was forming was flawed.

The potter, displeased with his work, destroyed it. Then he kneaded the clay into another lump and started over again, working until he produced a work which was satisfactory to him.

Then the Lord said, "O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the Lord. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel. At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it: If that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them." (Jeremiah 18:6-8)

Dexter teams eliminate Sikeston and Delta

Dexter scored ten times during a wild sixth inning and then had to hold off a Sikeston rally in the bottom of the frame to trake a 16-15 win over the Sikeston Blues in the Major Division of the Sikeston Invitational Softball Tournament at Puckett Field Thursday night.

Dexter's Minor Division team also stayed alive in the double elimination event, blasting Delta 21-4.

Sikeston held an 8-6 lead going into the sixth when Dexter struck for ten runs, sending fifteen batters to the plate. The Blues were down 16-8 going into the bottom of the frame, but erupted for seven of their own, five of them coming after two were out. Dexter hurler Heittman finally got the last out with the tying run on third and the winning tally at the plate for Sikeston. Ferguson and Sattrerfield ripped three hits apiece for Dexter, who out hit Sikeston 16-10. Vangilder had three hits for Sikeston, all of them doubles.

The loss eliminated Sikeston's Blues from the tournament.

In the first game, Dexter scored twelve times in the third en route to their big victory over Delta. Chism, Hill, Moore, Rowe and McFallen had two hits each for the winning team.

Benton takes on Oran at 6:30 in the Minor Division as loser's bracket action continues Friday evening. In he Major Division, Sikeston's Reds meet Oran at 8:30.

76'ers trip Eagles with sixth-inning tally

C. T. McDaniel's triple with nobody out in the sixth inning drove in what proved to be the winning run for the 76'ers Thursday night a they stopped the Eagles in the only game played in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League at the complex.

McDaniel's three-bagger scored Tommy Green, who had doubled to lead off the inning. Although McDaniel was at third with nobody out, the 76'ers could score him, but Tom Stinnett held the Eagles scoreless in the seventh to preserve the victory.

The Eagles scored two runs in the third to take a 2-1 lead, but the 76'ers bounced back in the bottom of the third to score twice and make it 3-2. A single run in the fourth by the Eagles tied it, and it stayed that way until the 76'ers scored in the sixth. John Chessor absorbed the loss for the Eagles.

The Eagles, who were in second place in the race, dropped to a tie for the second spot after the loss. First place Steward Steel (14-5) holds a game-and-a-half lead over Marks Food Mart (13-7) and the Eagles (12-6). The Bank of Sikeston also has an outside shot at the crown, three games back at 11-8.

Brett's three hits pace Royals to 6-4 victory

KANSAS CITY (AP) — It's only natural to cheer for your own teammate, no matter that he is threatening to take the batting championship away from you.

Brett, Kansas City's third baseman, and McRae, the Royals' designated hitter, are staging the finest seasons of their careers and running 1-2 in the American League batting statistics. And some people are starting to get on their nerves.

"I'd rather not talk about it at all," says McRae. "But the subject pops up everywhere we go and there's nothing we can do."

Brett cranked out three hits in Kansas City's 6-4 triumph over Minnesota Thursday night to push his average to .357, four percentage points ahead of McRae, who went one-for-two.

"Winning games is the first priority for me and I know it is for Mac, too," Brett said. "I've never been involved in anything like the league batting title and it's exciting, sure. I try never to think about it, but everybody keeps talking about it."

Both would prefer to let the season pass as it will and the awards fall where they may.

"We've got a lot of games to go and a lot of appearances at the plate and an average can go down in a hurry," said Brett. "I just want to do the best I can and help us keep winning and then, after the season's over, if anybody wants to give me any special recognition, that's great."

Brett bats third in the Kansas City lineup and McRae, usually, swings fifth. McRae's runs-batted-in total 45, and on many of those occasions Brett's the one he chased home.

"Why shouldn't I want Mac to get hits when I'm batting ahead of him?" asked Brett.

"He hits in front of me so I pull for him to get a hit, sure," said McRae. "Things like batting championships are nice, but I'm not worried about it. It's much too early in the season to start counting on anything like that."

Patriots-Chargers matchup at Norman tops exhibition schedule

By The Associated Press

The last time he saw Joe Washington, Coach Chuck Fairbanks stood on the sidelines cheering on the young freshman halfback. Tonight, four years later, Fairbanks will be on those same sidelines trying to devise a way to stop him.

The change in the coach's allegiance occurred, of course, when the two parted the college scene at Oklahoma for the pros — Fairbanks to the New England Patriots and Washington to the San Diego Chargers.

Those teams will oppose each other in a National Football League preseason game, one of two scheduled tonight.

The site makes the Fairbanks-Washington confrontation even more interesting — they are returning to Owen Field at Norman, Oklahoma, the first pro game to be played there since 1959. A crowd of 40,000 is expected to cheer their old favorites.

The other game will match two neighbors, the Washington Redskins and the Baltimore Colts at Baltimore, a battle between two of the NFL's powerhouses.

Oklahomans get still another chance to greet their old heroes on Saturday afternoon when the Cleveland Browns play the Atlanta Falcons in the first pro game ever at Stillwater, Okla., home of Oklahoma State.

On Saturday night, Buffalo will play at Cincinnati, Minnesota at Kansas City, New Orleans at Houston, Dallas at Los Angeles in a nationally-televised game, Tampa Bay and Green Bay at Milwaukee, Chicago and Seattle at Spokane and St. Louis and Oakland at Phoenix.

Two games will be played Sunday afternoon, Miami at Detroit and Denver at San Francisco. On Monday night, the New York Giants play at the New York Jets and Pittsburgh plays at Philadelphia.

Washington will not be the only former Oklahoma player Sooner fans can cheer. The game will almost resemble an alumni affair with San Diego also bringing in former Sooner guard Kevin Grady and former Sooner assistant coach Rudy Feldman.

Fairbanks has five ex-Oklahoma players — tight end Al Chandler, running back Leon Crosswhite, nose guard Raymond Hamilton and linebackers Rod Shoate and Steve Zabel.

Each team opened preseason play with victories last week — San Diego beat Philadelphia 20-7 and New England stopped the New York Giants in overtime 13-7. Washington, in his pro debut, ran for one touchdown and rushed for 38 yards.

The Redskins and Colts also opened on successful notes last week and are expected to play their regulars a good portion of this neighborhood rivalry.

Game shortened by rain

Card's whipped 5-2 by Twitchell relief job

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Philadelphia's Wayne Twitchell wasn't really playing a game with the St. Louis Cardinals Thursday night. It just seemed that way.

The 6-foot-6 Twitchell, whose pitching this year has been limited to 31 2-3 innings, mowed down the Cards for four innings in a 5-2 Phils victory and afterward explained how.

"I stay sharp by throwing a lot in the bullpen and facing imaginary batters," said Twitchell, 2-0, the winner during a game shortened to eight innings by rain.

"All the pitchers in the bullpen and Tim McCarver have helped me," he added. "I'll start an inning and throw to three batters — say maybe Lou Brock, Bake McBride and Ted Simmons — and count balls and strikes.

"You don't even have to have anyone standing next to the plate," Twitchell said. "Pitching's concentration anyway. When you get in a game, you're not supposed to look at the batter."

Twitchell, who was making his 12th appearance, entered in the fifth inning after Ollie Brown's fifth home run and Garry Maddox' two-run single had rallied Philadelphia to a 4-2 lead.

Brock and Joe Ferguson struck out before Twitchell yielded a two-out single to Hector Cruz in the sixth and made Jerry Mumphrey his third strikeout victim an inning later.

Willie Crawford and Simmons opened the Cards' eighth with singles, but Twitchell repelled the challenge by fanning Ferguson, Mike Anderson and Cruz for the game's final outs.

"I threw a lot of sliders tonight, just due to the fact the ball was slippery," noted Twitchell, who lowered his earned run average to 1.42 and extended his string of walkless innings to 19.

"He could take anybody's place in the starting rotation right now," Phils Manager Danny Ozark said. "It's just difficult to use all 25 players."

Before Philadelphia broke through, Cruz' ninth home run of the year had provided St. Louis a 2-0 lead in the second inning against Phils starter Tom Underwood.

A steady rain then began in the fourth with the Phils' Mike Schmidt at bat, but the real cloudburst for Cards starter Lynn McGlothen, 9-11, was triggered by the Brown blast.

Charlie Jones - Card's PA man for 30 years

.. AP Sports Writer

—"Rogers Hornsby was my idol," the white-haired man, a near-septugenarian, declared. "Whenever I see a guy complain about a third strike, I always remember what he said. 'If they're good enough to call, they're good enough to hit.'"

The decades have passed since Hornsby, once the terror of the National League, wore the uniform of the St. Louis Cardinals. But in his absence, much of his spirit remains within Charlie Jones.

A retired telephone company switchman who speaks with tones which are still mellifluous, Jones is proud of the fact that in 30 years he's missed but three Cards home games while serving as public address announcer.

"Two of them were when my stepfather died and the other was late in the season for a makeup date," he said.

"I had a double hernia once during the season and in two weeks I was walking. The only other time I almost missed was when I went through a plate glass window at the laundromat I own. I severed an artery. But the team was out of town.

"It's a long story how I became an announcer," allowed Jones, a spry man born nearly 70 years ago who grew up within walking distance of Sportsman's Park, the Cards' former home.

"I was an usher captain," he recalled. "I used to see this guy sitting there and I thought that was a better job than I had, so I asked about it. Then one day the guy got his hours changed and they offered it to me. They asked me if I could be at all the games and I said I could.

"I really had no experience except that in my job with the telephone company in talking to a lot of people," acknowledged Jones, who since taking over behind the microphone has announced lineups for nearly 2,500 games.

"The most difficult part is when substitutes come pretty fast and you have to wait for the umpire to make them official. The worst thing that ever happened, really, was when the Philadelphia club was in town and the next day Cincinnati came in. There was a catching change and I said, 'Now catching for Philadelphia . . .'

"Another time was Pittsburgh's catcher, Manny Sanguillen. I said 'Sanny Manguillen,' but the only guy who caught it was the Pirates' p.r. man. My feeling is that if you blow one, just don't say anything about it."

Highlights of the Jones career have, of course, included a World Series the Cards played in during his first year, 1946, and two subsequent fall classic appearances in 1967 and '68.

But like many others he misses the more intimate atmosphere of older ball parks and decries a higher perch to which he's been assigned at press level.

"When you were down on the field you were more or less in the game and you could hear both dugouts," he reminisced. "I have to think one of the reasons we are no longer there is because there were people with big ears who couldn't keep their mouths shut."

Lambert fires one-hitter for Aces

A two-out double in the first inning was the only hit Aces' hurler Tim Lambert allowed in pitching the Sikeston team to a 10-0 victory over Scott City in the Scott City Little League Invitational Tournament. Meanwhile, Lambert and his team were racking the losers for nine hits in the game shortened by the ten-run rule.

Mike Hurley had a perfect three-for-three night at the plate, with two singles and a double. He scored twice. Lambert was two-for-three.

The Aces scored seven times in the third, on four hits, to put the game out of reach.

The Aces will return to Scott City for a 5:30 p.m. game tonight against Cape. A victory would earn them a second game at 8:30.

NBA dispersal draft finished

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that the National Basketball Association has held its dispersal draft, a number of NBA teams might think it only fair that the Portland Trail Blazers hold one of their own.

If they did, the Trail Blazers probably would collect almost as much for their two front lines alone as the NBA took in for the 12 American Basketball Association players selected Thursday.

For example, how much do you think other NBA teams would fork over if they could take home Bill Walton or Sidney Wicks or Moses Malone or Maurice Lucas? Lloyd Neal would not come cheap either, and no doubt someone would pay a few sheckels for former No. 1 draft pick Larue Martin and current No. 1 draft pick Wally Walker.

All but Walker, who has yet to sign, belong to the Trail Blazers now after they selected Lucas and Malone in the telephone draft conducted at the NBA league office here.

They had to trade All Star guard Geoff Petrie, the last original player from Portland's 1970 expansion club, to Atlanta with reserve Steve Hawes to get Atlanta's No. 2 selection spot in the draft.

But it appears there are NBA general managers willing to send Portland adequate replacements in the following days and weeks if the Trail Blazers will part with some of their big men.

Veteran 6-9 forward Sidney Wicks once again found himself a big name in the trade rumor mill and there also was speculation that Malone would not be with the Blazers for long.

Portland probably will get its money's worth after shelling out $350,000 for the 6-10 Malone and $300,000 for the 6-9 Lucas, two of the ABA's bright young stars last season with St. Louis and Kentucky, respectively.

With the prices for the players pre-determined, only the Chicago Bulls dropped more into the kitty. They paid $1.1 million for 7-2 center Artis Gilmore of Kentucky, the top prize in the draft, which was still another step toward completing the merger agreement between the NBA and ABA.

Chicago had the first selection by virtue of its won-lost record last year, the worst of any of the 18 NBA teams or the four ABA teams that will be part of the merger this season.

The other high-priced selections were guard Ron Boone of St. Louis, picked No. 3 by Kansas City for $250,000; forward Marvin Barnes of St. Louis, selected No. 4 by Detroit for $500,000, and guard Bird Averitt of Kentucky, picked No. 8 by Buffalo for $125,000. Buffalo swapped picks with Milwaukee and threw in a second-round draft pick next spring to get a shot at Averitt.

In all, 12 of the 20 available players from the St. Louis and Kentucky franchises were selected — all but one on the first of the three rounds of the draft — and the teams paid a total of $2,832,750 for them. The money will be used to cover obligations to ABA players, the Kentucky and St. Louis franchises and those NBA teams which gave up original draft rights to the players involved.

The eight players not selected become free agents.

So. Fritz dropped

The System protects unique ecological communities, those in danger of extinction if they are overused. The areas range from native prairie to swamps, from huge trees to ... well, not to heron rookeries.

One area was South Fritz Island in Pike County. The 20-acre area was approved by the Conservation Commission in 1973. At that time, the Mississippi River island was a major rookery for American egrets and great blue herons.

But the birds abandoned the rookery for reasons best known to themselves, and as a result, the Conservation Commission has dropped South Fritz from its Natural Areas System.

CLEARING THE AIR ABOUT FOG

Chill air in early morning and late evening hours increases the possibility of developing fog conditions. And fog can be a formidable adversary to an inexperienced boater, warn the MerCruiser stern drive boating authorities. Always carry a compass. Upon approaching fog conditions, take a bearing toward shore and hold it until you get there and can follow the beach to port. Listen for and heed warning bells and whistles. If you really get lost in a fog, anchor and wait it out. As in any manner of boat operation, let common sense prevail even though your regular senses are obscured.

Midwest Plains tourney opens this evening

CHAFFEE — The Midwest Plains Regional 13-Year-Old Babe Ruth League Tournament gets underway tonight at Chaffee's Harmon Field with all four teams seeing action.

Ark City, Kansas will take on Missouri champion Jefferson City in the opening game at 6:00. Jefferson City won the Missouri crown last weekend at Dexter in the state tournament.

Chaffee-Illmo-Scott City, the host team, will meet Eddyville, Iowa at 8:00 in the second contest.

A team from Kansas was originally scheduled to compete in the tournament, but dropped out recently. The bracket was revised for four teams. The double-elimination tournament is scheduled to conclude Sunday afternoon.

Tournament festivities got underway last night as Missouri Treasurer James Spainhower spoke at a banquet at the Chaffee Elks Lodge.

Ruling gives communities new power to decide development, area growth

By The Associated Press

Recent Supreme Court rulings have given communities and their residents new power to decide such issues as what kind of development should be allowed and who has control over area growth.

Some experts fear that the rulings could open the way to the same kind of economic and racial discrimination that the courts have been trying to overturn in recent years.

Among the recent decisions was a June 21 ruling that upheld an Eastlake, Ohio, ordinance requiring an automatic voter referendum on all property rezonings.

In the majority opinion, Chief Justice Warren Burger rejected arguments that the ordinance was an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.

"Under our constitutional assumptions, all power derives from the people who can delegate it to representative instruments which they create," Burger wrote.

Justice Lewis Powell, in the minority, disagreed, saying, "The 'spot' referendum technique appears to open disquieting opportunities for local government bodies to by-pass normal protective procedures for resolving issues affecting individual rights."

Opponents of voter-controlled zoning say it is designed to keep minorities out of the suburbs. They also point out, however, that it could involve industrial growth.

An Associated Press survey showed only a handful of cities and towns across the country use referenda for determining zoning changes. Most communities require approval by a legislative body — usually the city council — in conjunction with public hearings.

George James, director of the state bureau of Regional Planning and Community Assistance in Wisconsin, said, however, that he anticipated new interest in requiring voter approval for zoning changes.

"I can foresee increased pressure now for the referendum method and we could end up with some very poor development," he said. "The founders of our country chose representative government over direct democracy, so to speak, so as to make things more orderly."

Exclusionary zoning, with ordinances designed to limit growth by setting minimums for the size or cost of new homes, has been a major focus of the attack on suburban housing discrimination. The battle has resulted in a series of lower court decisions against zoning laws that prohibited certain types of housing or made housing too expensive for many economic groups.

Supporters of open-housing won a battle in April when the Supreme Court ruled in a Chicago case that federal courts can in some cases require the construction of federally financed low-rent projects in white suburbs.

At the same time, however, the Supreme Court has upheld some restrictions on development. In addition to approving the Eastlake referendum method, for example, the court has ruled that communities may set limits on the number of unmarried, unrelated persons occupying homes in certain zones.

'Rhoda's' doorman to have own show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Many years ago, a pal of mine, an ex-singer named Denny Shryack, told me about a wild comic with whom he used to work club dates. He and the comic grew up together in Duluth, Minn.

Music was the guy's name. At first, he worked the lights for Shryack's vocal group, the Escorts. Then he started doing comedy bits.

The world is small, but it's still a shock to learn this Music fellow is the same citizen millions now known as Lorenzo Music, the off-screen voice of Carlton, the doorman on CBS' hit "Rhoda" series.

Next Tuesday, the Escorts' former lighting man goes before lights of his own as he and his wife, Henrietta, start taping their own syndicated TV talk, comedy and songfest program.

The daily one-hour opus, called "The Lorenzo and Henrietta Music Show," already has been sold in 40 markets, spokesmen for it say, and the list ranges from New York to the stars' home town of Duluth.

Which is no end of satisfaction for Music, a short, bald, friendly man in his forties who may be the only ex-entertainment director of Fidelman's Resort in Michigan to hit it big in television.

"I still have Fidelman's towel in my banjo case," said Music, who plays banjo and guitar, as does his attractive blonde wife.

They met while at the University of Minnesota. A few years later, they got married and toured the world, doing a folk song-and-comedy act in night clubs from here to My Tho, South Vietnam.

Dr. Lamb

Don't fall victim to arthritis quacks

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has had rheumatoid arthritis since 1948. He is 50 years old now. The disease stopped him from doing the type of work he was doing. In 1954 to 1959 he went to school. In 1959 he went to work as a bookkeeper and since then he has lost no work due to the arthritis. He is unable to walk very far or use his hands too much without pain and swelling. But he has led a fairly normal life. Now all of a sudden he feels he wants to try every quack thing that comes along. We have always watched his diet and we eat no fried foods, very little sweets. Now an outfit he is talking to is telling him no wheat, oats, milk products (only cream), no pork. But he can have all the eggs he wants. Won't that give him too much cholesterol for his age? He reads your column. If you would be able to write about his he would appreciate it.

I don't mind spending money but all the things he tries never help that much. He is on Darvon Compound 65 now from our family doctor, plus all the Vita Lea, Vit C, alfalfa tablets, calcium tablets and protein from the so-called health group he is involved with.

DEAR READER — Your husband should talk to his family doctor about that health group he is getting advice from. That is not a bona fide medical group. They are in business to sell vitamins and so called health food products. Your husband is only one of the many victims of frauds in the treatment of arthritis. There are plenty of quacks ready to prey on the victims of arthritis. Selling phony cures to arthritis victimes is a multimillion dollar business. My best advice to all the arthritics of all types is to never, never, never use any treatment that is not recommended by your doctor. Do not buy anything from door-to-door salesmen or fall for supposed miracle cures.

Vitamins are useful in people who need them but health faddists, not doctors, who have been pushing them for cure of arthritis are really a public health menace. While a person thinks he is getting or is going to get help from vitamins or alfalfa tablets, the joints may be undergoing permanent changes that could have been prevented. There is no evidence that any vitamins ever cured or improved a single case of arthritis. Anyone who tells you otherwise is either ignorant of the facts, has an untrained unscientific mind or may be a quack.

That diet sounds terrible. Certainly consuming a lot of egg yolks can increase the cholesterol intake in the diet and is contrary to the recommendations of the American Heart Assn. in the prevention of heart disease. I am confident he didn't get that diet from a reputable physician.

I am sending you a copy of The Health Letter number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis. You can find the address there of the nearest Arthritis chapter to get advice on arthritis clinics or where you can get a rheumatologist to supervise your husband's care. The most important thing a patient with rheumatoid arthritis can do is to be carefully followed by such a physician or clinic. There is a lot that can be done for rheumatoid arthritis and the status is summarized in that issue. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing and 50 cents for it. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Rock 'n' roll roller coaster carries Dr. Hook up, down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A rock 'n' roll roller coaster carried the Dr. Hook band from obscurity to the heights of success and back down into the depths of bankruptcy. But that catastrophe didn't derail them and now, amazingly, they're climbing upward again.

Their last single, a rendition of Sam Cooke's "Only Sixteen," topped the one million mark in sales and they are currently scoring with "A Little Bit More" on the top charts and "A Couple More Years" on the country listings.

"People are starting to accept us as a new group, not old timers who are making a comeback," says Dennis Locorriere, one of the leaders of the six-man group.

Dr. Hook, known in its pre-bankrupt days as Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show, formed in 1970 and began gathering followers who dug the band's wacky humor. Their antics on stage and song lyrics provided by Playboy cartoonist Shel Silverstein overshadowed their more-than-competent musical abilities.

The group's first two albums did produce two hit singles, however — "Sylvia's Mother" and "Cover of the Rolling Stone." And the latter, released early in 1973, won them a cover story in Rolling Stone magazine and propelled them into television and concert appearances.

But Dr. Hook was unable to follow up with another hit record and interest in the band faded. Big money dates fell off and by 1974 the band was a money-losing proposition.

Dr. Hook declared bankruptcy in November 1974.

"People thought we broke up. We didn't. We were just plain broke," the New Jersey-born Locorriere cracks. He is constantly joking and it is clear that laughter is one of his supreme pleasures in life.

As far as they know, no other rock group on the rocks has ever stuck it out long enough to bottom out with bankruptcy. But Dr. Hook didn't have it in mind to break up.

"They'd still recognize us," Locorriere says when asked why the six men and their road crew didn't go their separate ways.

"We still thought this group would work," offers Ray Sawyer, whose black eyepatch adds a distinctive note to the group's scruffy appearance. "It was just the people who didn't."

Bankruptcy actually was a means of staying alive a little bit longer than they would have otherwise. It took the creditors off their necks and got Dr. Hook out of its contract with Columbia Records.

The band pooled its pocket money and went into a recording studio to cut some records.

The studio — at $10 an hour — may have been cheap but Dr. Hook managed to come up with a handful of songs that persuaded Capitol Records to sign them in February 1975.

What's the law

Case of the moo-less cow

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

As Timothy was strolling past Farmer Grey's pasture one day, he looked up just in time to see one of Farmer Grey's cows depart for greener pastures. As he watched, the animal slowly leaned against the enclosure fence and fell over, dead.

That night, Timothy sneaked back to where he saw Farmer Grey's cow keeled over and proceeded to cart it off to his home.

The next day, the police came to Timothy's abode, and it was Timothy's turn to be carted off. He was hauled down to court, where he was booked on charges of stealing a cow.

"We caught him with the goods," the arresting officers told the judge. "When we arrived at Timothy's house, the cow was practically sitting on his living room couch."

"You've got this thing all wrong," protested Timothy in his defense. "I didn't steal any cow. A cow is an animal that eats grass, gives milk and moos.

"What I carted off couldn't do any of those things. Therefore, what I took wasn't a cow and I can't be convicted of stealing one."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Timothy of stealing a cow if it couldn't moo any more?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that Timothy did not steal a cow. What he took was the carcass of a cow.

Dexter teams eliminate Sikeston and Delta

Dexter scored ten times during a wild sixth inning and then had to hold off a Sikeston rally in the bottom of the frame to trake a 16-15 win over the Sikeston Blues in the Major Division of the Sikeston Invitational Softball Tournament at Puckett Field Thursday night.

Dexter's Minor Division team also stayed alive in the double elimination event, blasting Delta 21-4.

Sikeston held an 8-6 lead going into the sixth when Dexter struck for ten runs, sending fifteen batters to the plate. The Blues were down 16-8 going into the bottom of the frame, but erupted for seven of their own, five of them coming after two were out. Dexter hurler Heittman finally got the last out with the tying run on third and the winning tally at the plate for Sikeston. Ferguson and Sattrerfield ripped three hits apiece for Dexter, who out hit Sikeston 16-10. Vangilder had three hits for Sikeston, all of them doubles.

In the first game, Dexter scored twelve times in the third en route to their big victory over Delta. Chism, Hill, Moore, Rowe and McFallen had two hits each for the winning team.

Benton takes on Oran at 6:30 in the Minor Division as loser's bracket action continues Friday evening. In he Major Division, Sikeston's Reds meet Oran at 8:30.

76'ers trip Eagles with sixth-inning tally

C. T. McDaniel's triple with nobody out in the sixth inning drove in what proved to be the winning run for the 76'ers Thursday night a they stopped the Eagles in the only game played in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League at the complex.

McDaniel's three-bagger scored Tommy Green, who had doubled to lead off the inning. Although McDaniel was at third with nobody out, the 76'ers could score him, but Tom Stinnett held the Eagles scoreless in the seventh to preserve the victory.

The Eagles scored two runs in the third to take a 2-1 lead, but the 76'ers bounced back in the bottom of the third to score twice and make it 3-2. A single run in the fourth by the Eagles tied it, and it stayed that way until the 76'ers scored in the sixth. John Chessor absorbed the loss for the Eagles.

The Eagles, who were in second place in the race, dropped to a tie for the second spot after the loss. First place Steward Steel (14-5) holds a game-and-a-half lead over Marks Food Mart (13-7) and the Eagles (12-6). The Bank of Sikeston also has an outside shot at the crown, three games back at 11-8.

Brett's three hits pace Royals to 6-4 victory

KANSAS CITY (AP) — It's only natural to cheer for your own teammate, no matter that he is threatening to take the batting championship away from you.

Brett, Kansas City's third baseman, and McRae, the Royals' designated hitter, are staging the finest seasons of their careers and running 1-2 in the American League batting statistics. And some people are starting to get on their nerves.

"I'd rather not talk about it at all," says McRae. "But the subject pops up everywhere we go and there's nothing we can do."

Brett cranked out three hits in Kansas City's 6-4 triumph over Minnesota Thursday night to push his average to .357, four percentage points ahead of McRae, who went one-for-two.

"Winning games is the first priority for me and I know it is for Mac, too," Brett said. "I've never been involved in anything like the league batting title and it's exciting, sure. I try never to think about it, but everybody keeps talking about it."

Both would prefer to let the season pass as it will and the awards fall where they may.

"We've got a lot of games to go and a lot of appearances at the plate and an average can go down in a hurry," said Brett. "I just want to do the best I can and help us keep winning and then, after the season's over, if anybody wants to give me any special recognition, that's great."

Brett bats third in the Kansas City lineup and McRae, usually, swings fifth. McRae's runs-batted-in total 45, and on many of those occasions Brett's the one he chased home.

"Why shouldn't I want Mac to get hits when I'm batting ahead of him?" asked Brett.

"He hits in front of me so I pull for him to get a hit, sure," said McRae. "Things like batting championships are nice, but I'm not worried about it. It's much too early in the season to start counting on anything like that."

Patriots-Chargers matchup at Norman tops exhibition schedule

By The Associated Press

The last time he saw Joe Washington, Coach Chuck Fairbanks stood on the sidelines cheering on the young freshman halfback. Tonight, four years later, Fairbanks will be on those same sidelines trying to devise a way to stop him.

The change in the coach's allegiance occurred, of course, when the two parted the college scene at Oklahoma for the pros — Fairbanks to the New England Patriots and Washington to the San Diego Chargers.

Those teams will oppose each other in a National Football League preseason game, one of two scheduled tonight.

The site makes the Fairbanks-Washington confrontation even more interesting — they are returning to Owen Field at Norman, Oklahoma, the first pro game to be played there since 1959. A crowd of 40,000 is expected to cheer their old favorites.

The other game will match two neighbors, the Washington Redskins and the Baltimore Colts at Baltimore, a battle between two of the NFL's powerhouses.

Oklahomans get still another chance to greet their old heroes on Saturday afternoon when the Cleveland Browns play the Atlanta Falcons in the first pro game ever at Stillwater, Okla., home of Oklahoma State.

On Saturday night, Buffalo will play at Cincinnati, Minnesota at Kansas City, New Orleans at Houston, Dallas at Los Angeles in a nationally-televised game, Tampa Bay and Green Bay at Milwaukee, Chicago and Seattle at Spokane and St. Louis and Oakland at Phoenix.

Two games will be played Sunday afternoon, Miami at Detroit and Denver at San Francisco. On Monday night, the New York Giants play at the New York Jets and Pittsburgh plays at Philadelphia.

Washington will not be the only former Oklahoma player Sooner fans can cheer. The game will almost resemble an alumni affair with San Diego also bringing in former Sooner guard Kevin Grady and former Sooner assistant coach Rudy Feldman.

Fairbanks has five ex-Oklahoma players — tight end Al Chandler, running back Leon Crosswhite, nose guard Raymond Hamilton and linebackers Rod Shoate and Steve Zabel.

Each team opened preseason play with victories last week — San Diego beat Philadelphia 20-7 and New England stopped the New York Giants in overtime 13-7. Washington, in his pro debut, ran for one touchdown and rushed for 38 yards.

The Redskins and Colts also opened on successful notes last week and are expected to play their regulars a good portion of this neighborhood rivalry.

Ruling gives communities new power to decide development, area growth

By The Associated Press

Recent Supreme Court rulings have given communities and their residents new power to decide such issues as what kind of development should be allowed and who has control over area growth.

Some experts fear that the rulings could open the way to the same kind of economic and racial discrimination that the courts have been trying to overturn in recent years.

Among the recent decisions was a June 21 ruling that upheld an Eastlake, Ohio, ordinance requiring an automatic voter referendum on all property rezonings.

In the majority opinion, Chief Justice Warren Burger rejected arguments that the ordinance was an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.

"Under our constitutional assumptions, all power derives from the people who can delegate it to representative instruments which they create," Burger wrote.

Justice Lewis Powell, in the minority, disagreed, saying, "The 'spot' referendum technique appears to open disquieting opportunities for local government bodies to by-pass normal protective procedures for resolving issues affecting individual rights."

Opponents of voter-controlled zoning say it is designed to keep minorities out of the suburbs. They also point out, however, that it could involve industrial growth.

An Associated Press survey showed only a handful of cities and towns across the country use referenda for determining zoning changes. Most communities require approval by a legislative body — usually the city council — in conjunction with public hearings.

George James, director of the state bureau of Regional Planning and Community Assistance in Wisconsin, said, however, that he anticipated new interest in requiring voter approval for zoning changes.

"I can foresee increased pressure now for the referendum method and we could end up with some very poor development," he said. "The founders of our country chose representative government over direct democracy, so to speak, so as to make things more orderly."

Exclusionary zoning, with ordinances designed to limit growth by setting minimums for the size or cost of new homes, has been a major focus of the attack on suburban housing discrimination. The battle has resulted in a series of lower court decisions against zoning laws that prohibited certain types of housing or made housing too expensive for many economic groups.

Supporters of open-housing won a battle in April when the Supreme Court ruled in a Chicago case that federal courts can in some cases require the construction of federally financed low-rent projects in white suburbs.

At the same time, however, the Supreme Court has upheld some restrictions on development. In addition to approving the Eastlake referendum method, for example, the court has ruled that communities may set limits on the number of unmarried, unrelated persons occupying homes in certain zones.

The Olympic National Park in Washington State covers 897,885 acres including some of the finest remaining Northwest rain forest.

'Rhoda's' doorman to have own show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Many years ago, a pal of mine, an ex-singer named Denny Shryack, told me about a wild comic with whom he used to work club dates. He and the comic grew up together in Duluth, Minn.

Music was the guy's name. At first, he worked the lights for Shryack's vocal group, the Escorts. Then he started doing comedy bits.

The world is small, but it's still a shock to learn this Music fellow is the same citizen millions now known as Lorenzo Music, the off-screen voice of Carlton, the doorman on CBS' hit "Rhoda" series.

Next Tuesday, the Escorts' former lighting man goes before lights of his own as he and his wife, Henrietta, start taping their own syndicated TV talk, comedy and songfest program.

The daily one-hour opus, called "The Lorenzo and Henrietta Music Show," already has been sold in 40 markets, spokesmen for it say, and the list ranges from New York to the stars' home town of Duluth.

Which is no end of satisfaction for Music, a short, bald, friendly man in his forties who may be the only ex-entertainment director of Fidelman's Resort in Michigan to hit it big in television.

"I still have Fidelman's towel in my banjo case," said Music, who plays banjo and guitar, as does his attractive blonde wife.

They met while at the University of Minnesota. A few years later, they got married and toured the world, doing a folk song-and-comedy act in night clubs from here to My Tho, South Vietnam.

Rock 'n' roll roller coaster carries Dr. Hook up, down

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A rock 'n' roll roller coaster carried the Dr. Hook band from obscurity to the heights of success and back down into the depths of bankruptcy. But that catastrophe didn't derail them and now, amazingly, they're climbing upward again.

Their last single, a rendition of Sam Cooke's "Only Sixteen," topped the one million mark in sales and they are currently scoring with "A Little Bit More" on the top charts and "A Couple More Years" on the country listings.

"People are starting to accept us as a new group, not old timers who are making a comeback," says Dennis Locorriere, one of the leaders of the six-man group.

Dr. Hook, known in its pre-bankrupt days as Dr. Hook and the Medicine Show, formed in 1970 and began gathering followers who dug the band's wacky humor. Their antics on stage and song lyrics provided by Playboy cartoonist Shel Silverstein overshadowed their more-than-competent musical abilities.

The group's first two albums did produce two hit singles, however — "Sylvia's Mother" and "Cover of the Rolling Stone." And the latter, released early in 1973, won them a cover story in Rolling Stone magazine and propelled them into television and concert appearances.

But Dr. Hook was unable to follow up with another hit record and interest in the band faded. Big money dates fell off and by 1974 the band was a money-losing proposition.

Dr. Hook declared bankruptcy in November 1974.

"People thought we broke up. We didn't. We were just plain broke," the New Jersey-born Locorriere cracks. He is constantly joking and it is clear that laughter is one of his supreme pleasures in life.

As far as they know, no other rock group on the rocks has ever stuck it out long enough to bottom out with bankruptcy. But Dr. Hook didn't have it in mind to break up.

"They'd still recognize us," Locorriere says when asked why the six men and their road crew didn't go their separate ways.

"We still thought this group would work," offers Ray Sawyer, whose black eyepatch adds a distinctive note to the group's scruffy appearance. "It was just the people who didn't."

Bankruptcy actually was a means of staying alive a little bit longer than they would have otherwise. It took the creditors off their necks and got Dr. Hook out of its contract with Columbia Records.

The band pooled its pocket money and went into a recording studio to cut some records.

The studio — at $10 an hour — may have been cheap but Dr. Hook managed to come up with a handful of songs that persuaded Capitol Records to sign them in February 1975.

Dr. Lamb

Don't fall victim to arthritis quacks

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has had rheumatoid arthritis since 1948. He is 50 years old now. The disease stopped him from doing the type of work he was doing. In 1954 to 1959 he went to school. In 1959 he went to work as a bookkeeper and since then he has lost no work due to the arthritis. He is unable to walk very far or use his hands too much without pain and swelling. But he has led a fairly normal life. Now all of a sudden he feels he wants to try every quack thing that comes along. We have always watched his diet and we eat no fried foods, very little sweets. Now an outfit he is talking to is telling him no wheat, oats, milk products (only cream), no pork. But he can have all the eggs he wants. Won't that give him too much cholesterol for his age? He reads your column. If you would be able to write about his he would appreciate it.

I don't mind spending money but all the things he tries never help that much. He is on Darvon Compound 65 now from our family doctor, plus all the Vita Lea, Vit C, alfalfa tablets, calcium tablets and protein from the so-called health group he is involved with.

DEAR READER — Your husband should talk to his family doctor about that health group he is getting advice from. That is not a bona fide medical group. They are in business to sell vitamins and so called health food products. Your husband is only one of the many victims of frauds in the treatment of arthritis. There are plenty of quacks ready to prey on the victims of arthritis. Selling phony cures to arthritis victimes is a multimillion dollar business. My best advice to all the arthritics of all types is to never, never, never use any treatment that is not recommended by your doctor. Do not buy anything from door-to-door salesmen or fall for supposed miracle cures.

Vitamins are useful in people who need them but health faddists, not doctors, who have been pushing them for cure of arthritis are really a public health menace. While a person thinks he is getting or is going to get help from vitamins or alfalfa tablets, the joints may be undergoing permanent changes that could have been prevented. There is no evidence that any vitamins ever cured or improved a single case of arthritis. Anyone who tells you otherwise is either ignorant of the facts, has an untrained unscientific mind or may be a quack.

That diet sounds terrible. Certainly consuming a lot of egg yolks can increase the cholesterol intake in the diet and is contrary to the recommendations of the American Heart Assn. in the prevention of heart disease. I am confident he didn't get that diet from a reputable physician.

I am sending you a copy of The Health Letter number 4-11, Rheumatoid Arthritis. You can find the address there of the nearest Arthritis chapter to get advice on arthritis clinics or where you can get a rheumatologist to supervise your husband's care. The most important thing a patient with rheumatoid arthritis can do is to be carefully followed by such a physician or clinic. There is a lot that can be done for rheumatoid arthritis and the status is summarized in that issue. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing and 50 cents for it. Send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

What's the law

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

As Timothy was strolling past Farmer Grey's pasture one day, he looked up just in time to see one of Farmer Grey's cows depart for greener pastures. As he watched, the animal slowly leaned against the enclosure fence and fell over, dead.

That night, Timothy sneaked back to where he saw Farmer Grey's cow keeled over and proceeded to cart it off to his home.

The next day, the police came to Timothy's abode, and it was Timothy's turn to be carted off. He was hauled down to court, where he was booked on charges of stealing a cow.

"We caught him with the goods," the arresting officers told the judge. "When we arrived at Timothy's house, the cow was practically sitting on his living room couch."

"You've got this thing all wrong," protested Timothy in his defense. "I didn't steal any cow. A cow is an animal that eats grass, gives milk and moos.

"What I carted off couldn't do any of those things. Therefore, what I took wasn't a cow and I can't be convicted of stealing one."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Timothy of stealing a cow if it couldn't moo any more?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that Timothy did not steal a cow. What he took was the carcass of a cow.

Outdoor square dancing weekend is scheduled

BRANSON — Outdoor square dancing's annual major event in the Ozarks, Square Dance Weekend at Silver Dollar City, is scheduled Sept. 11-12. Callers will again be perched on the second-story balcony of an 1870-style hotel and dancers are to be arrayed throughout the town square.

"Reservations this year will be a must," according to Sonny Horton, group host for the event. "In the first two years the number of dancers attending more than doubled. This time we're expecting as many folks as we can possibly handle."

Singin' Sam Mitchell of Holiday, Fla., is the featured caller, along with staff callers Norman Madison of Kansas City, Art Galvin of St. Louis and Virgil Geminhardt of Springfield.

"With four callers," said Horton, "the activity is nonstop."

All of Silver Dollar City's famed entertainment -- crafts, cave, shows, rides and historic sights -- is available to dancers and all members of their families at special prices.

A free poster and reservation form may be obtained by writing to Square Dance Weekend, Silver Dollar City, Mo. 65616, or by telephoning 417-338-8206.

Motel accommodations are arranged by contacting Ozark-wide Reservation Service, 1207 W. Highway 76, Branson, Mo. 65616; 417-334-6448.

Soon after the Olympics finish in Montreal, Canada, more than 2,000 American athletes between the ages of 8 to 18 will meet in Memphis, Tennessee, for the National AAU-Chevrolet Junior Multisport Championship, better known as the National Junior Olympics.

The dates for these Olympics will be August 20-23.

The athletes will compete in eight sports: diving, swimming, synchronized swimming, judo, wrestling, track and field, gymnastics and trampoline and tumbling.

These young super sports have all competed and won in other meets throughout the year. For every boy and girl who gets to enter the National Junior Olympics, there are thousands more who competed in state and regional championships. Every year several million boys and girls take part in the Junior Olympic programs.

For many athletes who competed in the Olympic Games in Montreal, the Junior Olympics was their first big step, dash, flip, toss or splash.

Many of the boys and girls at the Olympics in Memphis hope to compete in the Olympics in 1980 or 1984. They know the importance of training and good performance at an early age. They are tomorrow's Olympic stars.

For Parents 'n Teachers

This section of The Mini Page is especially designed for parents and teachers to use with this week's issue.

Page 1: If your child is interested in the AAU Junior Olympic program and you do not know whom to contact, write to: The Junior Olympic Program, AAU House, 3400 West 86th Street, Indianapolis, Indiana, 46268. Send a stamped, self addressed envelope and indicate the sport in which the child is interested. The AAU also published an Official Rules for the 1976 Junior Olympics. You can get this by sending 75c to the above address.

Page 2: The Littlest Champion: Diana Goldsworthy can bounce 16 feet into the air. Have the kids measure how high that would be. Discuss trampoline safety and the fact that you have to know what you are doing or it could be very dangerous.

Secret Joke: Cut the joke out of the center. Use the guide as the code and have the kids write other messages to different members of the family.

Page 4: What Would You Do? Discuss how the little boy in the first picture must feel. As parents and teachers, can you help a child like this discover something he can do well? Look at the second picture and discuss the fact that success takes dedication, determination and practice.

See the horned lark. He looks as if he has horns, but he really doesn't. Those pointed things on his head are just feathers that stick up that way.

There are many horned larks around, but you don't often notice them because they are small and dull colored.

SPINAL NERVE INVOLVEMENT CAUSES MANY CONDITIONS

Since the discovery of chiropractic, no one needs to feel that he or she is destined to be sick all their life. Remember, "Where there is life there is hope and he who has hope has everything."

This spinal chart is directed especially to people who have tried to regain their health through methods other than chiropractic, and have failed. THAT FAILURE SHOULD NOT LEAD TO DISCOURAGEMENT, but to greater determination to discover the fundamental cause of all disease.

If your condition is not described in the chart, contact your participating doctor for a consultation, examination and x rays, if necessary. He will determine by his analysis of your spinal condition what you can expect from chiropractic care.
